Wilkes-Barre Man One of Falls Victims

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 27.—(INS.)—One of two men who perished by going over Niagara Falls yesterday was tentatively identified today as Joseph Miller, 65, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Between 30 and 40 persons were held up and robbed in a Hill Top tea room on Brodhead road, between Coraopolis and Aliquippa last night. The four bandits locked the women—about half the guests—and one man whose wife had fainted in the back rooms, and all the other men in the cellar, and escaped.

The women and the man imprisoned with them broke down the doors and released the rest of the men about 2 o'clock this morning.

The bandits, three of them wearing white masks and all armed, entered the place about 11:30 o'clock.

There were more than 30 late diners there.

His back to the door, the leader of the robber gang said:

"This is a holdup. If you keep quiet no one will be harmed."

Men and women were separated and herded into different rooms. One woman fainted and the robber directed her husband to remain with her.

TAKE VALUABLES

The bandits took their valuables from them. Watches, jewels and money were crammed into the robbers' pockets.

The men were told to remove their trousers. One of the bandits said:

"That's just so you won't be in a hurry to follow us."

Just then a car drew up in front of the place.

In it were Allen L. Stockwell, assistant superintendent of the automatic division of the Western Union Telegraph Company, of 2636 Norwood avenue, North Side; his wife, Margaret; two daughters,

Bishop Arranging Rites at Cathedral; Toll Now 40; New Home Will Be Built

At least five more inmates of the Little Sisters of the Poor Home for the Aged, razed by fire late Friday, are expected to die within the next 24 hours, hospital authorities revealed today.

With the death list already at 40, it was disclosed that three patients in the Homeopathic Hospital and two in the Pittsburgh Hospital, are in such serious condition that little hope is held for their recovery.

Nearly 100 of the injured remained in the hospitals today. Six died yesterday from burns, smoke inhalation, pneumonia or shock. Ten still are listed as missing.

NEW HOME PLANNED

Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, of the Pittsburgh diocese, announced today that a modern fireproof structure would be built on the site of the burned home immediately. He called a contractor into conference on plans this morning, he said.

The bishop added that the diocese probably would finance the project and attempt to raise funds by popular subscription later.

Fire Chief Richard L. Smith today reported to Public Safety Director James M. Clark that his investigation had disclosed that the fire "undoubtedly" was caused by spontaneous combustion in oil-soaked rags and cotton fiber.

An inmate had been scraping and oiling the floor, Smith said, and had left the scraper containing bits of cotton and dust soaked with linseed oil in a basement closet at 4:40 p. m. Friday, about six hours before the fire started.

Smith said he was of the

50 STRIKERS JAILED IN TAXI ROW

Fagan, Attacked In Home by Foe, Slays Assailant

Failing in the assassination of P. T. Fagan, district president of the United Mine Workers of America, a man said by police to be an agent of sinister influences at work in Western Pennsylvania's bitter coal strike was shot and killed in a struggle with Fagan at his home, 822 Woodbourne avenue, Brookline, shortly after midnight.

An accomplice of the would-be slayer was arrested a short distance away after fleeing from the scene holding a pitsol at the side of a taxicab driver.

The dead man is said to be Pat Murphy, a renegade miner from Kentucky. His companion gave his name as Fred Schneider, alias Hatfield, 39, of Fleming, Ky. He said he was a relative of Sid Hatfield, slain in the mine war in Kentucky several years ago.

Schneider was held for further investigation by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court today. Fagan was released on his own recognizance by the coroner and told to report later in Court today. Fagan was turned over to the coroner.

He was released on his own recognizance pending the inquest.

Fagan told homicide detectives Murphy was a Communist, they reported.

CAB PARADE RESULTS IN CLASH

Arrests Made After Crowd Chases Driver Accused Of Periling Spectators

Fifty union taxicab drivers on strike were arrested at Fifth avenue and Ross street this afternoon when a disturbance ensued as 158 cabs manned by the "Back to Work" faction paraded past the union headquarters.

Nearly 100 of the union drivers, who oppose settlement of the strike unless the cab company recognizes the union, are said to have started the disturbance after one of the paraders, they say, ran his car into the crowd along the curb.

Traffic Patrolmen Richard Bernstein and John Grau, stationed at Fifth avenue and Grant street, reported to Lieut. Edward Kirby that two shots had been fired at one of the cabs from a window near the headquarters of the taxicab union of Pittsburgh, 527 Fifth avenue.

DENY SHOOTING

Pedestrians also reported they had heard several shots. Members of the union denied there was any shooting, saying the supposed shots were backfire of the parading cabs. None of the 50 arrested was armed, police said.

Two patrol loads of police hurried to the scene and rounded up all union cab drivers in sight, they reported, as a precaution against further trouble.

Those arrested were lodged in Central station, charged with being suspicious persons.

Many of the union men chased the driver who had run into the crowd, police reported, after the strikers along the curb had shouted derisive calls at the cab drivers in the procession.

The "Return to Work" parade started shortly after 1 p. m. from the Melwood avenue garage of the Yellow Cab Company.

PARADE DOWNTOWN

The paraders moved to the downtown district by way of Penn avenue, crossed to the North Side, then returned downtown and started out Fifth avenue.

The strike settlement committee announced yesterday that 400 men would go back to work today, stating that they had been victims of an "enforced walkout."

According to M. J. Burns, president of the taxicab union of Pittsburgh, 700 striking drivers voted not to return until the union was recognized. This faction today minimized the "return to work" movement, saying there were not enough men available to man the cabs already placed in operation.

Mayor Charles H. Kline was expected to fix a time for a conference on settlement of the strike late today.

MAN BURNED IN FACTORY BLAST

One man was burned seriously and $500 damage caused when a rubber still in the filter room of the Pittsburgh Glove Manufacturing Company, 413 South Main street, exploded shortly after noon today. The injured man, Thomas Murphy, 18, of 5319 Rosetta street, was taken to Passavant Hospital.

The fire following the explosion was extinguished before it spread. Several hundred gallons of gasoline were stored next to the filter room.

The still is used for mixing crude rubber and chemicals used in the manufacture of rubber gloves.

FRANKLIN BARS HISTORY TELLING OF COLONISTS' DRINKING

SCHOOL BOARD MEMBERS SEE PROPAGANDA

Vote Down Book Despite Recommendation Made by Principal and Teachers

FRANKLIN, Pa., July 27. — Franklin grade school pupils will never hear tales of drinking by early American colonists, if the school board can prevent it.

By a vote of 4 to 3, the board has put under ban the textbook "Socialized History of the United States" by Vannest and Smith because it considers it "wet propaganda."

PASSAGE CITED

Ambrose Shrawley, who led the group victorious against the recommendations of the teachers, cited the following passage as one unfit for pupils to read:

"President John Adams drank a large tankard of cider every morning before breakfast. Nearly all the colonists drank liquor. There were no temperance societies.

"When Europeans came as colonists to the new world, they continued to drink the same beverage they had been used to in Europe—that is, whenever they could get it."

THREE BACK BOOK

The other three directors voted in support of the recommendation of Supt. of Schools Charles E. Carter. High School Principal Karl M. Russell and a committee of seventh and eighth grade teachers, who recommended the Vannest-Smith history in preference to any other of six or more investigated.

Director Shrawley declared board members may ask teachers for advice but the board is not bound to accept their recommendations. The textbook, he said, may be in use in the schools for many years and even though the statements in the book may be the truth, he saw no necessity of directing attention of pupils of eighth grade age to passages that smack of nothing else than wet propaganda.

PROPAGANDA DENIED

The committee of which Prof. Russell is chairman stated its opinion that the Vannest-Smith history was free of propaganda and expressed the belief the complete truth of history should be taught as one means of promoting good citizenship.

Dr. H. E. Cunningham, president of the board, Dr. Charles Brown and Robert Kaylor voted to accept the Vannest-Smith history, but the other four members voted for Elson's "The United States, Its Past and Present."

NEW YORK, July 27.—Harry Richman, night club owner and actor, was suffering from minor burns and three of his guests, members of a Broadway cast, were in a hospital today, victims of an explosion and fire on the actor's yacht.

Gladys Glad was prostrated from shock.

Mark Hellinger, newspaper columnist and husband of Miss Glad, Sam White, marine captain, and Robert Levy, Richman's chauffeur, were severely burned.

SPILLED GAS BLAMED

The yacht, the Chanalmar II, which Richman purchased two weeks ago, was wrecked by an explosion Sunday morning as the party moored it at Greenport, L. I. A load of gasoline had just been taken on board and gas was believed to have dripped to the engine where it was ignited by sparks.

A ragged streak of flame leaped from the engine. Capt. White and Miss Walsh were blown into the air and fell back into the cockpit where blazing wreckage fell over them.

TOSS GIRL INTO WATER

Hellinger, badly burned on one arm by flaming gasoline, and Richman, who suffered burns of the hands and arms, dragged Miss Walsh from the burning craft and threw her into the water. Richman and Hellinger then dived into the water and rescued her.

Miss Glad, a principal with Richman in the Ziegfeld Follies, scrambled to the dock unhurt. She ran screaming up and down the dock and was taken to the hospital suffering from nervous shock.

Richman, Miss Glad and Levy were expected to leave the hospital today.

Hellinger was able to return to the boat after firemen put out the fire and salvaged $15,000 in jewels and money.

MURRAY QUITS BRIDGE FIGHT

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 27. (AP)—Gov. William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, back from his martial law camp at the Denison-Durant toll bridge, commanded the state highway department today to obey the orders of the federal court he had previously defied.

A federal injunction issued at Muskogee Saturday and denounced by the governor as "preposterous" and a violation of state rights, forbade state interference with persons using the toll bridge and dissemination of information along the highways directing traffic to be newly-opened parallel free bridge.

The governor had declared martial law Thursday in a zone at the toll bridge head and, carrying an old horse pistol, had assumed command of a national guard force there. He sought to prevent traffic over the toll bridge while toll bridge owners in Texas were preventing use of the free bridge built in part with Oklahoma tax money.

IN DEATH DIVE, SCRAWLS NOTE

MENDOTA, Ill., July 27.—(AP.)—So the world would know why he plunged to his death, H. J. Hewin, 45, an unlicensed airplane pilot of Dubuque, Ia., scribbled a note of explanation yesterday as his plane fell to earth.

The unfinished note, found amid the debris of his tiny parasol plane, said:

"Something wrong in rear cylinder. Think broken ring. No compression. Blows by——"

Hewin was still seated in the cockpit of the wrecked plane when he was found.

WASHINGTON, July 27. (AP.)—July is witnessing an increasing activity in bituminous mining and a declining demand for anthracite.

For the second successive week production of bituminous increased over the previous seven-day period during the week ending July 18 while anthracite operations decreased.

Estimates of the Bureau of Mines from operators' reports showed a tonnage of 6,794,000 net tons was produced in the nation's soft coal mines in that week. Anthracite production was 751,000 tons.

The bituminous tonnage was 123,000 tons or 1.8 per cent above that of the preceding week which in turn was 700,000 tons higher than for the week ending July 4 which included the Independence Day holiday when mines were idle. During the week of July 11 Pennsylvania mines produced 1,882,000 net tons of bituminous compared to 1,597,000 tons for the previous week.

BARGAINS!

Never before in the history of retail store sales have there been so many bargain opportunities. Never before in the history of merchandising have prices been so low for staple goods—for the day-in and day-out needs. In fact, it looks just like the rock bottom.

What and Why?

The Sun-Telegraph
Sponsors A New Contest Offering

$25.00 Every Day in Cash Prizes

...for Readers of This Newspaper...for Finding the Best Bargains Offered by Advertisers in the Sun-Telegraph

Here's the Idea...

You know and we know that the advertising announcements in the Sun-Telegraph are teeming with bargains—offers of merchandise you need and buy at prices that make buying more attractive than ever before.

What are these bargains? What are you finding? Why, in your mind, are they bargains? Within a day or two you have undoubtedly made purchases from the advertisers who are in the columns of the Sun-Telegraph and you had a special reason for buying their particular goods. Something in particular drew your attention to these bargains. What was it—the price, the quality, or both?

You are shopping every day. Let's make it double profitable to you. Study the advertising announcements in the Sun-Telegraph, see what you really need, examine the goods offered. If the article or articles are something that you want and the price is satisfactory, make your purchase and then tell the "What and Why" Editor of the Sun-Telegraph why you made the purchase.

Confine your letter to 100 words or less. Tell in your own way why you think the article you purchased was a bargain at the price you paid for it, but bear in mind that the article you refer to must have appeared in the advertising announcements in the Sun-Telegraph. The purchase ticket must accompany your letter and the date the announcement appeared in this newspaper.

You Not Only Save When You Buy Today, But You Also Have an Opportunity to MAKE a DOUBLE SAVING!

The type of the article purchased, whether or not it is a necessity or a luxury, does not enter into this contest. Only the BARGAIN angle is to be considered. If you think it is a bargain—WHAT is it and WHY? Tell the "What and Why" Editor and make your shopping more attractive and more profitable than ever.

$25.00 in Daily Cash Prizes

First Best Letter	$10.00
Second Best Letter	5.00
Third Best Letter	3.00
Fourth Best Letter	2.00
Five Next Best Letters, each $1.00	5.00
	$25.00

READ THESE SIMPLE RULES

(1) The "What and Why?" contest is sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, not for urging readers to purchase what they do not need, but with the idea in mind of emphasizing the fact that the counters in the Pittsburgh stores are indeed filled with real bargains. The Sun-Telegraph knows that many readers of this newspaper will take advantage of these rare offers as they are there announced in this newspaper and is anxious to tell all readers about these bargains and why they are bargains. The purchase price of the article does not enter into the rules of the contest. You may find a bargain for a penny—not price. But if you find a bargain, tell us what it is and why in a letter of less than 100 words.

(2) The bargain must have been announced in the DISPLAY advertising of the daily or Sunday Sun-Telegraph and your letter must mention the day and date the announcement appeared, and be accompanied by the sales slip given to you at the time of purchase. Address your bargain letters to the "What and Why?" Editor, The Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. They should be written and mailed not later than 24 hours after the purchase has been made.

(3) Cash prizes will be awarded for the best "What and Why?" bargain letters.

See List of Prizes Above.

(4) The names of winners will be announced in the Sun-Telegraph one week later from the day the bargain announcement was made in this newspaper. This means that there should be no delay in sending in your contest letters and sales slips.

(5) Employees of the Sun-Telegraph or members of their families are not eligible for entry. In cases where the judges decide that letters are of equal merit duplicate awards will be made. All letters submitted automatically become property of the Sun-Telegraph, with the right to use them as this newspaper may so determine. No correspondence pertaining to the contest will be answered. The "What and Why?" bargain letter contest will run for two weeks—or longer, at the option of the Sun-Telegraph.

WIN A CASH PRIZE!

Start Today! Read the Advertising Announcements

in the Sun-Telegraph, look for what you need, examine the goods offered, and if you think you have found a bargain, tell the Sun-Telegraph about it.

The awards will be made daily by an impartial set of judges.

PENAL SYSTEM DENOUNCED AS OBSOLETE

Wickersham Group Charges U. S. Methods Increase Crime; Cites Crowding

By WILLIAM F. FLYTHE
Universal Service

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The American prison system is inadequate, obsolete, fails to protect society or reform the criminal, and tends to increase crime, the National Commission on Law Enforcement and Observance declares in a special report submitted today to President Hoover.

It was a stinging indictment of prisons, reformatories and jails. Shocking conditions were revealed in most of the prisons, with overcrowding and close confinement causing prison riots. Radical recommendations for changes in federal, state and county jails were made.

BUILT ON 1819 PLAN

America's antiquated penal system, the report declared, is modeled on the old Auburn (N. Y.) Prison idea, built on the style of a fortress in 1819 and the scene of desperate rioting. Cells are too small, there is scant ventilation, vermin is rampant, punishment is severe, the report said. There is idleness, no segregation of criminals and conditions in general lead to discontent and revolt, the report said adding:

"Nearly everybody leaves prison, and unless they leave better than when they entered, society has gained little by their incarceration."

The commission says that to accomplish its purpose a new type of penal institution must be established, one "that is new in spirit, in method and objective." It recommends a large number of smaller prisons, in which the offenders of the various classes may be segregated, instead of the tendency to confine a large number of prisoners under one roof. It stressed in particular a more liberal use of parole and probation.

BRUTALITY BAN URGED

By the construction of new places of confinement along the lines recommended by the commission it was declared overcrowding could be avoided and only the hardened, dangerous criminal kept in a "fortresslike" building. The report went on:

"The millions of dollars now employed to construct elaborate maximum-security prisons could, with much better advantage, be used in the development and proper financing of adequate systems of probation and parole.

"We find our present system of prison discipline to be traditional, antiquated, unintelligent and not infrequently cruel and inhuman. Brutal disciplinary measures have no justification. They neither reform the criminal nor give security to the prison. We recommend that they be forbidden by law."

WARDENS UNDER FIRE

The report bitterly scores prison officials, the wardens, the keepers and the guards. It declares most wardens are political appointees with a short tenure of office and little sympathy for their task. It also criticized rules and regulations governing conduct of prisoners and drastic penalties for trivial infractions.

These include the use of manacles to fasten a man to the bars of a cell, the water "cure," and solitary confinement on bread and water.

In some cells designed for only one man, as many as three are confined, at times all handcuffed to the bars together, it was declared. These conditions are still quite common, the report said, although they are denied by prison officials as well as prisoners, who do not dare to expose them.

CONTRACT LABOR ASSAILED

The commission urges the obliteration everywhere of contract labor by prisoners and says the prison will serve the state best if it surrenders the idea of profit-making and turns its attention to the task of becoming self-sufficient. It recommends the use of prison labor on public works, however, as most advantageous to the state and least injurious to outside capital and labor." It also says that some wages should be paid to the prisoner, "as a means of maintaining his dependents and promoting his self-respect."

One of the principal reforms suggested is education for the prisoner, which in time should lead to his parole. Each offender should be studied individually and there should be wider latitude in indeterminate sentences.

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin
Radio Editor

Clap hands! Here's Paul Dumont back with a minstrel show on KDKA at 10:30 tonight. Weber and Fields whose radio program has merited more attention than it received, say Auf Wiedersehn on WCAE at 8:15. Lois Bennett singing Estrellita and Elliott Shaw imparting expression to The Trumpeter are highlights of the Family Party on WCAE at 9:30. KDKA tries two new programs, one at 8 under the direction of Ed Harvey, blackface comedian, and a sketch at 8:30 called Jean and Her Dad. Mary and Bob learn Love's Strangest Lesson in the land of Eugene Ore, WCAE at 10.

Such Popularity

Riggs and Moke, The Crazy Pair, have developed a tremendous following with their nutty broadcasts over WCAE, mostly during the Edgewood last Friday night we found a drug store packed with ardent listeners.

The proprietor told us the store is kept open half an hour later on Monday, Wednesday and Friday just to accommodate the boys' boosters. That sentiment of another extreme expressed in a letter received at WCAE Saturday. It was from a poolroom owner in Pitcairn who asked the management to "please put Riggs and Moke on the air in the daytime as they break up business in my poolroom every night they're on the air at 11."

Question a Day:

Is there any truth to the report that Jack Smart and Irene Bentley were married secretly about a week ago? Mrs. W. K., Bentleyville, Pa.

Answer — We didn't see a thing in Winchell's column but just to make sure we wired Jack and Irene. Jack was married all right, all right, but the bride was Alice Coy, who starred on Broadway in "Up and Up." We don't know how "the long tall girl from Dixie" got mixed up in this affair. Irene says she is still single.

ADVANCE SELECTION
AUGUST SALE OF FURS

This famous annual event brings unequalled opportunities to save on new fashions at the season's lowest prices.

Fur Department "At Home"
Tomorrow and Wednesday Evenings
8 to 10 P. M.

SIGNIFICANT FACTS FROM THE AUGUST FUR SALE

Pleasant surprises are always welcome, and the August Sale presents a succession of exciting new ones.

• • •

Foremost are the advantageous prices. The keynote of our Sale is "More fur, better fur for the money—at less money."

• • •

For example, a Hudson Seal (dyed Muskrat) coat with choice of seven trimmings that two years ago would have been $335—last year $235—is now $185. Other coats at proportionate savings include a Krimmer coat for as little as $235, and a sterling quality Jap Mink or a Persian Lamb coat ready made, or custom made to your order—at only $285.

• • •

The 1932 fashions, too, present a new story. A more slender silhouette—straight skirts, adjustable collars, different sleeves—the accepted fashions from the late Paris openings.

• • •

Advance Selection is an excellent time to inspect the values in their entirety, before the August Sale crowds.

• • •

Two evening receptions—tomorrow (Tuesday) and Wednesday nights—8:00 to 10:00 o'clock. They invite especially the investigation and selection of business women—and those who will be away during the August Fur Sales.

Cab Drivers Return to Work in Body

TO THE PUBLIC:—

We, the taxicab drivers who have affixed our signatures to this statement, who believe in fair dealing not only for ourselves but for our employers and the public as well, have decided to withdraw our support from the "walkout" which was forced upon us by officers of the local union.

"We furthermore have determined to return to work and will do so in a body, reporting at our respective garages and ready to man the cabs at noon, Monday, July 27.

"In taking this action, we hold that we are within our rights and that no stigma attaches to our resolve. Rather, we consider it would be the heighth of folly to continue to submit to an enforced idleness in support of an unfair and outlaw movement which we refuse to dignify by the name of "strike," but, rather, term it an enforced "walkout."

"In repudiating the walkout, we likewise repudiate the officers of the local union, who, without the knowledge of the rank and file, forced idleness upon us by proceedings alike unsanctioned and unheard of in the organized labor movement.

"These officers, armed with a strike vote obtained ostensibly to enable them to adjust certain working conditions many weeks prior to the walkout, wrongfully used this authority in an arbitrary and unconstitutional manner. They served notice of a strike at the hour of midnight, calling for desertion of the cabs one hour later, when they well knew there could be no deliberations at such time and in such brief period looking toward a peaceful adjustment of differences.

"Whether it was because of such tactics on the part of the local officers, or for other reasons, we do not know, but the aid and assistance we expected to receive from the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, with which our local union was affiliated, has not been forthcoming.

"We have determined, therefore, that we, as decent American workingmen, with an American idea of fair play for all, cannot longer be a party to what our intimate knowledge shows us to be an outlaw strike movement which not only subjects us to want and distress, but works injury to the company employing us, serious inconvenience to the public and expense to the taxpayers of Allegheny County.

"Therefore we have resolved to follow our deliberations, which have shown us to be right in our conclusions, with immediate action and will return to work at the earliest possible time in a body. The hour set for this action is at noon, Monday, July 27th.

"Our purpose in publishing this advertisement is to inform the public of the facts of the situation, also, to announce, with emphasis, that Pittsburgh taxicabs from Monday noon on will be operated by an efficient force of drivers constituting a majority of the number engaged in the walkout. Their names follow:

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, July 27.—"The world needs a new giant of music." It is Walter Damrosch clearing his throat.—Damrosch back from the echoing hills of Hollywood airing his opinions on music in much the manner of the film shahs discussing the destiny of the screen whenever they set foot in Manhattan.

It's just an old New York custom—this backing of amusement celebrities into steamship and railroad-station corners, telling them to talk on the subject nearest their hearts. And the more startlingly they talk the better the chance for the dear old headlines.

It's startling to hear Damrosch say that the world needs a new giant of music. It will certainly be startling to Richard Strauss. It may even be startling to Igor Stravinsky, working his modernistic head off. Hollywood seems to have made the dean of conductors a pessimist. Strange, considering her sunshine.

Damrosch wants a new Wagner or Beethoven, who "will turn music in a different direction." Well, we could stand, too, a new Titian or Rembrandt, a new Booth or Bernhardt, even a new Stephen Foster. If any of them came along we'd probably shut the door in their faces, tell them to go study the old masters.

Without Wagner or Beethoven music is already being turned in a different direction. It may not be music that will live 100 years from now, but it is music that is vividly expressing the spirit of the times. Bigwigs call it jazz, dismiss it with a shrug and a sneer. Yet it is reflecting, if not definitely molding, a civilization. It fits the mad world we're living in down to a T, down to, you might say, Henry Ford's model T.

And does the dean dismiss Tschaikowsky as you or I would dismiss the tub-thumpers of the jungle? He says the Russian master is becoming moribund. If he cocks an ear to his loudspeaker he wouldn't think so. Tschaikowsky today agitates the air oftener than any other of the so-called great composers. And his works seem as fresh and vigorous as ever. If he is growing moribund then I am Charles Curtis and I'm planning to regain my seat in the senate.

* * *

Yet there is merit in what Damrosch says regarding the death of new music. It is true as he says, that conductors are obliged to use the same material over and over again, that they find it constantly more difficult to arrange fresh and interesting programs. But that is one of the drawbacks of radio.

Excitement Addicts as Bad As Promiscuous Flirts

She rather runs a dance hall—hostess.

Is that how you put that way.

Fred wants to know. The lady in question is his Girl Friend. And Fred has honorable intention of making her his Missis. But now he's beginning to wonder. For every time they are out together she can't make her eyes behave. And when Fred remonstrates she says that it's just a habit of hers and doesn't mean a thing. But

Does it?

ATTRACTS MEN

Read on. Maybe you know a girl like that—or yourself. May be you are. Yes.

Dear Sally:

Can you help a fellow. I hope so. I have studied the girl I don't know what to do. You see I am in love with a girl who I am really very fond of. She seems to be too. But the rub is that when we are together she insists on attracting the attention of other men.

You might think that would be enough to make me fight shy of her without asking any advice, but the really puzzling part of it is that whenever I call her attention to it she claims that she didn't mean anything by it—that it is just an old habit of hers and that she really loves only me and wouldn't knowingly hurt my feelings for anything in the world. Then she cries bitterly.

So I don't know what to think. You see outside of that one thing she is such a darn sweet kid. Do you think she is just stringing me?

WORRIED ABOUT HER

She used to work as a dance hall hostess. I wonder if that is the reason she is like that. Maybe that dance hostess job hasn't left her system yet. What do you think. And maybe it really doesn't amount to anything.

Nevertheless I am worried. I can't imagine her doing things like that if she really is telling me the truth when she says she loves me. But on the other hand I know she is a good girl. And maybe she is really trying to get rid of that dance hall complex. Do you think she is? Or is she just a good actress?

Please tell me what to do, Sally. I can't figure it out myself and you don't know how much I will appreciate some help.

FRED.

Well, son, you haven't given me a great deal to go on. You haven't said how far she goes to gain this attention which upsets you so.

Perhaps she is just handing you a line. She may be just another silly butterfly, living for the brief glamor and excitement of passing affairs. In which case she'd be pure poison as a wife. Kind hearted person's—yes. But you never could bet on her as a partner because she never could bet on herself. Dance hall life hurts many a decent girl. But promiscuous flirts are that. Makes addicts of them, not hop or booze addicts, but excitement addicts which are just as bad.

MUST STOP NAGGING

Or, on the other hand, she may be just a lively kid doing silly things. She may love you deeply and truly and yet be human and young and fond of admiration. Some of the grandest wives and mothers have been gay little flirts in their time. You can't forbid her to ever see men or delight in their attention. She will always see them if she is alert and interested in living and if you're going to turn every careless laugh and gesture into a felony that's your bad luck.

Whichever she is, butterfly or regular kid, you're not helping matters by pulling a fit of sulks. One thing is sure. Boy, if you keep nagging at her and accusing her of two-timing you you'll lose her sure as shooting, not because she doesn't mean to be square with you, but because you'll be making a pest of yourself and driving her out of your life.

So make up your mind. If you think you can trust her, do it. But if you're going to be always suspicious of her and always hurt every time she looks sidewise, then break with her before you wreck both your lives.

Do Not Let Fear Keep You from Eliminating False Friends—Fay King

REALLY, I AM NOT AT ALL INTERESTED IN HER AFFAIRS
I DON'T CARE WHAT YOU THINK OR SAY OF ME, I JUST WANT TO BE LEFT ALONE.
GUESS I'LL DROP IN AND SEE HOW THEY ARE GETTING ALONG
FAY KING

By FAY KING

No matter how many acquaintances one has, one has very few real friends.

And real friends are not always the ones who go about claiming to be.

Too many so-called "friends," though not welcome or sincere, manage to hang on for years, because one has not the courage to shake them off.

Like everything else, friends can change. Those that were once very dear can become no end of a bore, dropping in and out of curiosity more than anything else.

The bearers and disturbers of one's peace and harmony. Why should one be in fear and trembling of offending such? Eliminate them!

Nothing they can think or say about you can be half as bad as being bored and annoyed by them.

Lillian and Madge Count Themselves in on Conference

You see," Dicky began with the evident intention of relating the old incident of Junior's childhood, the memory of which annoyed me so much, but even as I opened my lips to protest, I caught sight of my father's harassed face and closed them tightly. He was wildly impatient to get on with the conference he wished with Dicky and Harry about the safeguarding of the farm-house, but he was so fastidiously careful of the amenities that he would not interrupt his son-in-law's story. I knew that protests would only delay the tale, not prevent it, unless I succeeded in making my husband angry. So I made no verbal protest, only put up my hand in a feigned threatening gesture against Dicky, and with a broad grin he proceeded with the tale.

"Lil's heard this saga many times," he began, "but you two men haven't, and it sure sheds a sidelight upon the suppressed ferocity of my mild-looking frau here. You wouldn't think she'd be guilty of assault and battery right in the public streets, would you? Well, just listen to th

Marvin, you lived when y," he said. "We'd been taking a walk, and I went in one of the shops to make some purchase or other. Madge wouldn't take Junior inside the shop because of measles or mumps or housemaid's knee, or something else prevalent in the town, so I went in alone. I didn't come back as soon as my son and heir thought proper, and when he had fussed unavailingly about the delay he proceeded to cast himself down on the sidewalk and give a convincing imitation of another child he had seen try the same tactics with apparent success a few days before.

"I came out of the shop just in time to see the performance, but you can bet I didn't let on I belonged to the family. Madge tried a mild reasoning command once, a peremptory command twice, then she rolled up her sleeves and went into action. She picked the youngster from the ground, turned him upside down and—but I'll draw a thick black veil. Suffice it to say that the ensuing performance was one which should have been staged only in a home with the curtains drawn. But it worked. Junior was too astonished to scream, and when his mother finished he was sobbing—and docile. She walked him off toward home at a tremendous pace, apparently forgetting all about me."

"You can bet you didn't do any double trot to recall yourself to her remembrance," Lillian said caustically. "You sneaked home by another street as if you'd never heard of a small boy in a tantrum."

"That was because I did not wish to interfere with Madge's discipline," Dicky said loftily. "I never have done that, have I, old dear?"

I shook my head with a smile, divided as I generally am between exasperation and tenderness.

But" he finished grandiloquently, "Junior never has thrown himself down upon a pavement since."

I suppose that supports the old theory. Beat 'em up before they're three and you won't have to attend their hanging before they're 30." Mr. Underwood contributed so soberly that I "but" and protested indignantly. "Harry, I never beat my child. I never—" then I saw the twinkle in his eye and his broad grin and reddened.

"Had you that time," he said, and Lillian commented sapiently:

"Madge and I both believe in a modification of that theory at that. I've heard her expound it often."

"But thank you for the story, Dickybird. It again has enlivened a day for me. I never tire of hearing it. But now I want to hear something else, Chief"—she turned to him deferentially. "Madge told me while you were gone what had occurred. Did you find out anything more?"

I tossed her a mental tribute. She had cut the trivial conversation short just as I guessed it was proving unbearable to my father. And she had subtly challenged the determination he had expressed to me of conferring only with Harry Underwood and Dicky about the serious situation which the sinister threat of the Chinese had brought to us.

My father's poise almost deserted him.

"Why—yes—I did," he said slowly. "But—it isn't necessary to trouble you and Margaret with it."

Lillian rose and going over to him took him by the lapels of his coat and gave him an affectionate little shake, a little endearment which we both often give him, but which I am sure no one else would attempt in the face of his austere dignity.

"No use, Chief," she said flippantly but with a warning note of earnestness in her voice. "You mustn't make a stag party out of this conference. Madge and I are declaring ourselves in on it."

Correct Manners

Follow the Invitation Form

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Today for the first time in my life I received a wedding invitation to an informal wedding. Is it proper to write a small note accepting the invitation, or how should I go about it? THANK YOU.

Yes, if the wedding invitation were in the form of a note your answer should be in the form of a note. And it should be answered as soon as you can do so. Something like this:

Dear Mrs. Gray:

You were very kind to invite me to the marriage of Jane and Tom on Saturday afternoon, September the first, at four o'clock at the Chapel of the United Church, and I am most happy to accept your gracious invitation. It is such a joy to me to see this great happiness come to these two great people, and I am honored that I am asked to the great event of their marriage. Thank you so much for asking me, and I'll be there.

Dearest love to you all.

Devotedly yours,

Tipping on Trains

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to take a trip which will require occupying different trains for a day and a night. Kindly give me instructions concerning all rules in regard to tipping such as who to tip, what amount and when.

On the day train you fee the porter of the Pullman. The fee is at least 25 cents and if your trip is for the entire day the fee would be at least 50 cents, and more if you have special service and if you wish. Then, of course, there is the fee to the dining car waiter about a quarter or 10 per cent of the amount of the check. This fee is given when you pay your check and the fee to the Pullman porter is given as you leave the train.

On the night Pullman you fee the Pullman porter 25 cents, the minimum fee, and anything more that you wish suggests for extra service or for extra courtesies. And the dining car fee to the waiter at dinner and at breakfast.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Sudden Twists Often a Cause of Back Sprain

As a result of a sudden twist or fall, the back may be sprained. The pain following such an accident is often severe, even terrifying.

Dr. Copeland

I recall playing golf with a man who was quite energetic in his driving. Following the swing of his club, he suddenly collapsed to the ground. The man complained of severe, agonizing pain in the back caused by the sudden sprain.

In a case like this, there is no change in the appearance of the back. Often, too, there is no history of a twist, and the cause may be traced to a blow.

There is stiffness of the back and pain. The pain is most marked when the position is changed, or if there is an attempt to bend the body in certain directions. As in the case of my golf companion, it is sometimes all but impossible to stand erect.

In simple cases of backstrain, the pain is due to stretching or bruising of the muscles. In the more severe types it is caused by an actual tearing of the muscle fibers. In such cases the pain persists for a long time, often several weeks.

It is sometimes difficult to distinguish a sprain of the back from lumbago. Lumbago is really an inflammation, usually described as a "neuralgia" of the muscles of the back. It usually comes on after exposure to cold.

In acute backstrain, rest in bed is imperative. Heat in the form of a hot-water bag or electric heater gives great relief.

It is important to support the back and allow the injured parts to rest. This is best accomplished by adhesive strapping applied by the doctor. In more severe forms and particularly where there is damage to the sacro-iliac joint a supportive brace should be worn. Great comfort is given by a belt which can be had at any instrument house or drug store.

On another occasion I shall tell you about similar symptoms due to body poisons.

Gossipy Children

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

There are just as many and varying personalities among children as you will find among adults. The responsibility then of each of us in contact with any child is to recognize the types and try to balance them as much as is in our power.

We have all known the child who goes from one adult to another telling and retelling choice bits of gossip. This child usually is precocious and serious-looking beyond its years, and enjoys the attention and conversation with grown people more than normal play with other children. Not a nice type, but neither is the grown-up gossip nice.

And the too bad part of the whole think is that adults usually contribute materially to the child's gossipy habits by the old, weather-beaten method of "pumping" him.

If there were no grown people too interested in their neighbors' affairs there would soon be no children to act as little scandalizers.

The gossipy child usually comes from a home where personalities enter into every conversation, where the fact that Mrs. Jones was married before she came here, that Mr. Jones has lost his job, that Mrs. Brown was taken to the hospital are facts of importance away over and beyond the understanding things which are happening in this big world of ours.

But even though we may be inclined to listen to gossip ourselves we can help this type of child, or rather a child who has unfortunately gotten into this habit, by refusing to entertain his tales, by saying we don't want to hear things about our neighbors, that we are are too busy working and playing to have time to wonder what the other fellow is doing.

If his news gets scant attention, he will soon look to other methods to interest us. And the adult who deliberately pries into his neighbor's personal affairs by getting data from a little child, who can have no realization of the significance of what he is telling, is a sneak and a person unfit to come into contact with young minds.

There are children who enjoy gossip just as there are pitiable adults who do, but at least we can help the child. Let's try.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Weak eyes, eyes that suffer from strain, are seldom blessed with long, luxuriant lashes. To make lashes grow, keep the eyes in good health and bathe the lids first with hot water then with cold; apply gauze which has been dipped in chilled witch hazel or a boric acid solution.

For the long skirt, frilly collars, more sartorial fluff, let us be grateful they have put a crimp in the dress line of the girl who goes in for mannish attire. She is out of the picture these days, unless she is rigged up for tramping, camping or horseback riding. Man's attire is so hopelessly practical that he doesn't thump a single heartbeat when he sees his best girl encased in shirt, collar and breeches. Men adore ruffles and curls, the darling saps.

When cleaning hair brushes and combs add a few drops of ammonia to a strong soap suds. Use some sort of a small brush. Rinse with clear water and dry in the sunlight. Brushes and combs should be washed whenever the hair is shampooed, otherwise they deposit dust and dandruff on clean tresses-locks.

Dancing, to be a perfect exercise, should be rhythmic and according to natural movements of the body. When a dancing daughter twists her neck in an unnatural manner, shunts up one shoulder, goes in for serpentine squirmings, she is doing an injustice to her muscles and interfering with the cultivation of a graceful, beautiful body. The kind of dancing that makes for anatomical loveliness is one form of physical culture.

NEW CINDERELLA -:- Pinch-Hits for Clara Bow And Wins Success -:- AMUSEMENTS

Peggy Shannon Makes Rapid Conquest of Movie Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 27.

Of all the recent success stories, Peggy Shannon's is the most dramatic.

Called in to pinch-hit for Clara Bow, the red-haired stage actress faced a forlorn prospect. Yet she came through with distinction in "The Secret Call," and now is about to play her fourth part in quick succession—the lead opposite Clive Brook in "Working Girl."

This story is being evolved under Zoe Akin's practiced touch from the stage play, "Blind Mice." To quote Paramount, it is about "beautiful metropolitan shop girls whose youthful eagerness for excitement carries them into real-life drama."

Clive Brook

None of which, I wager, will be more exciting than Miss Shannon's rapid conquest of Hollywood. So long as there are experiences like hers, you are never going to be able to convince young people that this is the toughest racket in the world.

BRAVO, AL!

Under the new red-tape regime of getting in and out of studios, dozens of extra policemen have been added to patrol the lots.

Visiting Fox this week, Al Jolson took one look at all the uniforms.

"Ye Gods!" he exclaimed. "When did they declare martial law around here?"

LATEST GOSSIP

Hedda Hopper has a neat way of turning a phrase. Upon being shown a picture of Clark Gable, snapped on the bridle-trail, she remarked: "When you can look at a man on a thoroughbred and not say, 'What a good looking horse!' then the man has it" . . . Speaking of horses, there is a drinking trough on Hollywood boulevard in the middle of the business section of the film capital. It's a hold-over from days gone by. The Humane Society keeps it up now, and dogs are chiefly benefited . . . Nowadays a studio doesn't fail to take up an option. It declares a moratorium . . . Charles MacArthur has made what many scenarists will consider a quixotic gesture. He has asked to be taken off salary to rewrite some of the dialogue for "Lullaby." Not only this, but he has sent to New York for Ben Hecht to come out and help him do it.

Perhaps the fact that Helen Hayes (Mrs. MacArthur) makes her screen debut in the picture has something to do with it. Still, M.G.M. officials are probably stunned . . . All reports to the contrary, Universal is said to be determined to make "Once in a Lifetime," the Hollywood travesty . . . Gloria Swanson has left Paris and she will be here August 10 . . . And another traveler is Frederic March, who comes back here from a year in New York.

Helen Hayes

HE SOLVED DEPRESSION

An odd way of beating dull times in the studios has been developed by Robert McKenzie, whom you will remember as the prosecuting attorney in "Cimarron." Jobs being scarce, Mr. McKenzie and his family are running a tent show on the outskirts of Culver City, where several great movie plants are located. One daughter, Ella, plays feminine leads, another, Fay, (aged 12), takes children's roles while Mrs. McKenzie does character parts. When the head of the family gets work in the films, he has an understudy to take his place in the show. And playing such old-timers as "Laff That Off" and "The Man From Oklahoma" the McKenzie family is paying the grocery bills and putting money in the bank.

HONOLULU, July 27.—(AP).—Charles Zimmy, legless professional swimmer, of Long Beach, Cal., completed 100 hours of continuous swimming at 1 a. m. today and claimed a world's record.

Richard Dix has the starring role in "The Public Defender," picture coming to the Stanley Friday.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Cab Calloway, the ha-cha-cha dusky director, dancer and chanter, will bring his Cotton Club syncopators to the Enright Friday for a three-day engagement. Cab, you will not have forgotten, recently was a feature in the Stanley. 'Twas no longer ago than last week.

Small Timer asserts that there are in the country gas stations sufficient not only to fuel some of the people some of the time, but to fuel all of the people all of the time.

* * *

Billie Dove, who has not made a picture for a year, will be the star of "The Age for Love," soon to be seen on the screen. It is a production of Howard Hughes, who turned out "Hell's Angels," which kept Ben Lyon out of the limelight for more than a year while it was in the making.

Small Timer says he is the kind of a man who can feel at home anywhere — except at home.

Julian Eltinge, our most noted femme impersonator, is a star in "The Nine O'Clock Revue," which is on the stage of the Music Box in Hollywood.

* * *

Small Timer says girls no longer marry for "better or worse" but for more or less, meaning both time and money.

* * *

Out in Los Angeles they're expecting the arrival of Ethel Barrymore, who is booked to open there on August 3, in "The School for Scandal." Florence Reed has been playing there with Guy Bates Post and Walker Whiteside, in "Three Men and a Woman," and now they are trying to lure Miss Reed into the talkies. She was in the silents some years ago.

Small Timer, bowing off the stage, says that during illness is the only time he gets a real square meal—bouillon cubes.

Movie 'Heavy' Was Once Good Little Boy

John Milian, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's famous "heavy," rises to remark that "heavies" aren't always as villainous as they look. He, in his youth, he asserts, was a Boy Scout and did a good deed a day!

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

(Copyright, 1931, Daily Mirror, Inc.)

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(So go ahead—make fun!)

That it was Dickens who coined the term "Sandwich Man" for those fellers who parade the streets enclosed by signs.

That Harvard owes its early prosperity to a lottery. The courts granted the right so that the college could improve its coffers.

That Edward VII coined the expression "Keep the change," they say. Because jingling coins in his jeans made him nervous.

That Bronx is spelled incorrectly. It is really Bronck, named after James Bronck, who first settled there.

That 43,369,813 people die each year. You may be next. Boooo!

That while you are not allowed to enter Gramercy Park (N. Y.) unless you have a key—a dog is buried there.

That the first German gun captured by the A. E. F. is now on Broadway, Brooklyn, at Stuyvesant avenue.

That no Dyak may marry unless he has killed someone.

That the average winter temperature of Sitka, Alaska, is the same as that of Richmond, Va., where Winchell is a household word, but wotta word! (So Ben Finney says).

That if you sunburn readily you're a heliophiliac!

That anyone working in Monte Carlo is barred from the Casino.

That the State Hospital at Jacksonville, Ill., has 100 pairs of roller skates. They say roller-skating benefits the mentally unsound.

(Doctor, fetch me my ball-bearings!)

That the average length of life in the 16th Century was 18 yrs.

That the Fine Arts Museum in Boston has a finer collection of Japanese Art than any museum in Japan. (Y'welcome, Boston.)

That the sergeant is the most important police officer.

That in several States one may murder an atheist without fear of punishment if none but atheists witness the deed.

That cigarets are prohibited in Mecca. I feel a song coming on ("For I just can't mecca my eyes behave").

What a spot, as Holtz would say, for a ripe tomato!

That the Philippine Islanders can't get their Independence "because they are so uncivilized," but most of the lurid magazines which are peddled in the good old U. S. are barred there!

That you insult a Hindu if you offer him something with the left hand. (And I'm a southpaw!)

That the Boston Journal in 1863 was printed on paper made entirely of wood, the editor adding: "So that it must endear it to the heads of its readers."

That on the West Coast you can mail ice-cream.

That if all the 'phone users spoke in a loud tone continually the 'phone firm would undergo great expense increasing the amount of electricity over its wires.

That wine tasters do not swallow the wine! (The sillies!)

That it once was the custom here on Thanksgiving for storekeepers to present the police captain of the precinct with a turkey, the "stuffings" of which were only gold and silver coins.

That the largest railroad terminal in the world is the Hudson Terminal of the Penn. R. R., which covers six acres.

That only a lawyer may receive stolen goods.

That the sensation of music halls in Yurrop is a hound who answers questions by wagging up and down for "yes" or sideways for "no."

That Lou Meltzer observes that "You know you're on top when they borrow your money or swipe your stuff!"

That the reason Alexander Woollcott has two l's, three o's and two t's in his last name is so that his last name will be as long as his first.

And that if you don't like this column—then why the heck don't you go back to the country you came from?

Studio Signs Directors

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has given new long-term contracts to two of its directors, W. S. Van Dyke and Jacques Feyder.

Van Dyke directed "Trader Horn" and "Never the Twain Shall Meet" and has just completed a Bayard Veiller melodrama, "Guilty Hands."

Feyder directed Greta Garbo in "The Kiss" and Ramon Novarro in "Daybreak" and "Son of India" since coming to this country from France, as well as many foreign language dialogue films.

Stage Director to Boss Screen Dances

Busby Berkley, New York stage director who worked on the screen production of "Whoopee," has been engaged by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to handle the dancing and ensemble numbers in the picturization of "Flying High." Bert Lahr, who played in George White's original stage production of this show, is working in the screen transcription, and the cast also includes Charlotte Greenwood, Hedda Hopper and Guy Kibbee, with Charles Riesner directing.

Public Life

Marie Dressler becomes a candidate for public office in "Politics," new talk film which opens Friday in the Penn.

Polly Moran On Stage

Polly Moran will arrive in New York the early part of next week and will make a series of personal appearances at Loew theaters before returning to the coast for her next screen assignment.

One of the first personal appearances on her eastern tour will be at the Capitol Theater the week of August 14.

SHAW FAVORS ANGLO REVOLT

By CHARMION VON WIEGAND
Universal Service

MOSCOW, July 27.—"The English-speaking people of the western world ought to be ashamed at not having been the first to start the revolution to overthrow capitalism."

Such was the seventy-fifth birthday message that George Bernard Shaw, now visiting Russia with Lady Nancy Astor's party, delivered to the world yesterday.

The Irish dramatist made his pronouncement before a group of Soviet worshippers who attended his birthday celebration in the gilded Hall of Columns, once the gathering place for Russian nobility. Shaw did most everything on his birthday but see Stalin or eat birthday cake, admitting he preferred black bread.

POLICE ARREST POLICEMAN

Patrolman Charles Stampson and Daniel Kelly testified they had arrested Woods on complaints that he was frightening pedestrians. Woods testified he was off duty at the time. He had been drinking, he said.

Magistrate Ray Schneider said:

"A policeman has no business getting drunk. He is a dangerous man because he has a weapon."

Inspector Bernard Kirley was to be apprised of Woods' case, police stated.

TWO MEN ARRESTED HERE AS HIJACKING SUSPECTS

COLEMAN QUITS PROSECUTOR CONTEST

McKeesport Man to Run for Judge Instead of District Attorney; Smith Talked Of Filing of a petition for the Republican nomination for common pleas court judge by William H. Coleman came as a surprise on this, the final day for filing by judiciary candidates at Harrisburg, Coleman, who lives in McKeesport, had been prominently mentioned as a possible candidate for district attorney on a ticket to be headed by Charles C. McGovern and William D. Mansfield for county commissioners.

Coleman was non-committal today, merely saying within a few days he would issue a formal announcement concerning his candidacy.

He visited the district attorney's office and was quoted by his friends as having said he was definitely out of the race for that office. This, they said, indicates that Deputy Attorney General Ralph H. Smith will likely be the candidate for district attorney on the ticket expected to be headed by McGovern and Mansfield.

Denny O'Neil's Son Out for Treasurer

Petitions were being circulated today by J. Denny O'Neil for the Republican nomination as county treasurer. He is a son of the late J. Denny O'Neil, of McKeesport, for years prominent in Allegheny County politics, and is employed by the board of tax assessment and revision. He lives in McKeesport.

David B. Johns, of Crafton, today filed for the Republican nomination as prothonotary. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the same office in 1915. John Vogt, incumbent, and C. J. McBride, secretary of the county tax board and treasurer of the Republican county committee, are also in the field.

Johns is referee of the workman's compensation board and former chairman of the county board for assessment and revision of taxes.

Reich's Campaign Aides Named

W. Clyde Grubbs, chairman of the campaign committee for Joseph H. Reich, candidate for the Republican nomination for judge of common Pleas court, has announced his assistants and the opening of headquarters on the fourth floor of the Berger Building. The chairwoman of the committee is Mrs. Richard W. Martin, widow of the late Judge Martin.

The committee includes State Senator Frank J. Harris, former Mayor William A. Magee, and former Judge Robert M. Ewing.

Bruff Announces For Register

Former Sheriff Judd H. Bruff, Spanish war veteran, has formally announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for register of wills in opposition to the incumbent, Joseph N. Mackrell, and Councilman Harry A. Little.

Bruff stated:

"I will enter this campaign as I did that of 1910, as an independent, without fear of any opposition I may meet. My faith in the voters of this county to select those whom they please to place in public office is just as strong as when I was elected in 1910."

Sixteen Candidates For Poor Director

Robert A. Foley, of Mt. Lebanon township, subordinate assessor for the county tax board, has taken out petitions as a Republican candidate for one of the three directors of the poor. He is the sixteenth candidate to take out petitions for that office.

Charles E. Wetzel, of 1232 Jancey street, was the first of the 14 candidates for county commissioner to file petitions with the county election bureau. His petition contained more than 200 names.

Attorney McGrath In Race for Judge

Attorney John J. McGrath yesterday announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for county court judge. He is a World War veteran and lives in the Thirty-second Ward, formerly Overbrook.

McGrath's announcement said he would advocate several reforms in juvenile court procedure.

CAR RETURNED, WHISKY THEFT ADMITTED

Auto License Furnished By Victims Leads to Arrest; Many Robberies

Two alleged hijackers were being held by Squirrel Hill police today and two others were being sought following the holdup early yesterday of Joseph Policastro, of 43 Hamilton avenue, Greensburg, and a woman companion at Thomas boulevard and North Lang avenue.

Policastro told police he had been robbed of $180 by bandits who, with their automobile, forced him against the curb. He gave police the license number of the alleged bandit car which, a short time later led to the arrest of Joseph Vinto, 28, of 6418 Apple avenue and Carl Antonio, 25, of 6406 Apple avenue.

DENY TAKING CASH

Vinto, according to police, implicated Antonio and two other men in the holdup. He denied they had taken money from their victim, but admitted, police declared, stealing Policastro's automobile which he said was laden with whisky.

Policastro and his woman companion were ordered out of the machine into one of the two handed cars. One of the cars drove away with Policastro's machine and when he returned to the scene with it the whisky was gone, police said.

Policastro and his woman companion were then ordered to drive away in their machine.

Policastro did not appear against the pair at the East End Police Court today and Magistrate Ray Schneider continued the case until tomorrow.

SIX HOLDUPS

Six holdups and a dozen house robberies reported over the week-end were being investigated by city detectives today.

R. J. Snyder, of 518 O'Tilla street, and his friend, Betty Weber, of 3181 Shady avenue, were held up by two bandits in Schenley Park Saturday night. The bandits obtained $17 and a watch value at $40.

Attacked by two thugs in Galveston avenue Saturday night, J. M. Fink, of 1312 Boyle street, was robbed of a ring valued at $150 and a watch valued at $50.

ROB CHAIN STORES

An armed Negro obtained $125 in holdups of three chain stores in the Hill district within an hour Saturday night. From a P. H. Butler store at 2635 Webster avenue, the thug obtained $45, and from another Butler store at 1706 Wylie avenue he got $30. From an A. & P. store, 2404 Wylie avenue, the rouber escaped with $50.

Held up by two men in Murdoch street, near Schenley Park Saturday night, Charles Reutzel, of 1853 Shaw avenue, and S. H. Harkness, of 4922 Haum boulevard, and robbed of $26.

Safe crackers visited the Jones dry goods store at 421 Federal street, it was discovered yesterday. A checkup was being made to determine what had been stolen from the safe.

Clothing, jewelry, silverware and cash comprised the loot of burglars who visited a dozen homes in various sections of the city.

PAROLE WAITS TWO BOYS

A five-year parole awaits John Krall, 17, of 327 Four Mile Run road, and Richard Hirschmann, 19, of 1621 Westfield avenue, when they are released from Huntingdon Reformatory. They were sentenced today by Judge James H. Gray for the holdup of the Dow drug store, Smithfield and Diamond streets, June 22 last, when they forced the manager to aid them in carrying out a safe containing $975 and $35 from the cash register.

They were sent to the reformatory for the robbery and the parole was given on the theft of an auto from William Ferry, 7011 Upland street, on June 7. Dominic Chiappino, 21, of 4352 Chatsworth avenue, their companion, was sentenced from six months to five years in the workhouse.

J. C. White, superintendent, will be established in his new office August 1.

World Starts to Perform Its Summer Capers

—By Arthur (Bugs) Baer—

There's a zep and a sub off for the Pole, and a tree-sitter in Battle Creek, Mich.

Which indicates we are back to normality. When we start acting eccentric we are in mid-summer form.

The Monday medal goes to the American who is walking backward around the world. His reason is that he is tired of meeting strangers.

If he turns his head once he loses the bet. And as he is getting close to the Atlantic Ocean we think he will lose the bet anyway.

Mr. Stimson should demand that his next conference be transferred to the Versailles Hall of Looking Glasses. After looking over the last 15 treaties we're convinced that it is done with mirrors.

Looks like the optimistic diplomats are in the same fix as the farmer in the runaway hay wagon. All he cold report was progress.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., July 27.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

A fellow was just up here telling me that one of the causes of the extreme heat was that the Japanese Gulf Stream was in closer to us this year, and that the water was much warmer, hence warming the land. Even the ocean is against us. Did you ever think as many things could happen to one country all at once? Ex-President Calles has declared that you can use silver to pay your debts instead of gold. He is trying to get silver back here where it belongs. That's fine. Mexico has got the silver, but what about us? We will have to start paying off with potatoes and watermelons.

Yours, WILL.

BALLOON LANDS HERE, TIED FOR RACE VICTORY

Castle Shannon Girl Finds Note Dropped Just Before Southworth Is Downed

Detroit II, entry in the Detroit News balloon trophy race, apparently tied for first place, was forced to descend on a farm near Option, nine miles southeast of Pittsburgh, yesterday.

Tracy Southworth, veteran pilot of the bag, dropped a note as it passed over Castle Shannon saying:

"Balloon Detroit II passed over Castle Shannon going toward the southeast at 10 a. m. today. Altitude 12,800, going south. Haven't used any ballast since 3:10 a. m. Only two and three-fourths bags left."

The message, written on a large red card and attached to a red flag, was found by Alice Longhenry on the lawn of her home in Poplar street, Castle Shannon. Southworth was forced to let the rest of his ballast go when he hit a strong down current of air 50 minutes later. The blast proved too strong and he was forced to land.

The Detroit II is believed tied with WJR, piloted by Edward Hill, which descended at Marietta, O. An official check will be made to determine the winner.

Six of the seven entrants that left Detroit Sunday landed in Pennsylvania and Ohio and one was down at Galt, Ontario.

Goslin Overturns Dope • L. Waner's Great Pegs
Pirates Outplay League Mack Trio Wins 51
Cochet Saves France Sutherland's Problem

TIME CHANGES COMPLEXION OF DEALS

SOME MEN MAKE MISTAKES more than the next few months to determine whether baseball's worst goat is the writer of a baseball [illegible] there was the Navin Field deal for instance [illegible] shaped up as being worth more than a ton of hot cakes other players involved in the swap, and it looked as if Detroit had drawn a couple of lemons [illegible] Leroy O'Doul and Fresco Thompson. But O'Doul really swung into a sensational batting stroke that transformed the Robins from trailers into pennant contenders until they lost six of their last eight games and dropped into fourth place.

Goose Goslin

And the Goose Goslin has changed the complexion of an American League exchange made on June 13, 1930, in which he was traded by the Senators to the Browns for Heinie Manush and Alvin Crowder. Manush had hit .378 and .355 in the preceding two seasons and Crowder was rated a pitcher of the front rank. Goslin was said to have a dead arm and his batting average had dwindled from .379 in 1928 to .288 in 1929.

[illegible] were no grass and sand Pitt Bad of having received [illegible] the site. Their opinion that the Browns [illegible] was strengthened by developments in the game last season. Manush hit .346 to Goslin's .308 [illegible] Crowder was a flop in the Navin era.

However, a different story has been told this season. Crowder has been a keen pitching disappointment and has won only eight games for the Senators while losing the same number. Manush fell off in his hitting so woefully that he was benched for two days last week for the first time in his career. Meanwhile Goslin started on a slugging rampage that put him among the league's leading hitters with an average of .357 and his great stickwork has been a tremendous factor in making the Browns the surprise team of the year. Trades are not to be judged hastily.

ON THEIR DEVIOUS WAY to Pittsburgh the real Giants look three more ball games but there is a certain promise in it by showing in the Bucs in this week's four-game series. Not only have the New Yorkers stopped on the present western trip losing eight out of 13 contests but the Eastmen are much improved in addition.

Of the last 20 games the Pirates have won all but three, a better record than was made during the same period by any other club in either league except the As who ran up a string of 15 straight wins before the Indians stopped them yesterday. The Rovers who have pulled up from the three games of fifth place had a chance today to beat the Senators' winning streak of the season at six for the third time they had won [illegible] a row.

AS LONG AS France has Henri Cochet in his best form, just so long does that country bid fair to retain the Davis tennis supremacy. Cochet yesterday for the fifth year in succession, by a count of three matches to two against England. Again it was Cochet who swayed the result and again he demonstrated that he is the world's greatest amateur. The Davis Cup is supposed to represent world team supremacy but with Cochet contributing to France's three victories two wins in the singles and helping Jacques Brugnon to capture the doubles it would appear that individual supremacy had quite a bit to do with the outcome.

Paul Swiderski

ONE OF THE [illegible] men to predict Jack Sharkey would fail to defeat Mickey Walker was Jack Hurley manager of Bill Petrolle and he says he did it on the strength of a fight which most fans used as an argument against Mickey's chances.

That was the 10-round no-decision bout in Louisville on the eve of Derby Day last year, in which Paul Swiderski knocked Walker down six times in the first two rounds. Hurley says it was the fighting spirit Walker showed after those knockdowns that convinced him Sharkey would not be able to beat Mickey.

"THAT FIGHT IN Louisville was one of my best arguments why Mickey would beat Sharkey," Hurley says. "Walker went into the Swiderski fight without having seen the inside of a gymnasium for weeks and in no more shape to fight than I was.

"Swiderski may not be the best heavyweight in the world but he is no mug and after he had flowed Mickey six times in the first two rounds you wouldn't have given [illegible] straw hat for Walker's chances. Yet he kept getting up and came on to win the popular decision. When I recalled that exhibition I figured that Sharkey would not be able to beat that spirit and he wasn't.

TO THE ABILITY he has consistently shown in other departments to win a place among the National League's greats, Lloyd Waner now adds another accomplishment—that of being a thrower unsurpassed for accuracy by any outfielder in the big show. During the last 10 days the younger Waner has featured the games at Forbes Field with four sensational throws that were marvels of accuracy, two to the plate and two to third base. As they used to say of Tris Speaker, Lloyd throws strikes from centerfield.

OF THE TOTAL of 70 victories rolled up by the As to date in the American League pennant procession all but 19 have been pitched by Lefty Grove George Earnshaw and Rube Walberg. Three pitchers are plenty if they're good enough.

Grove made it an even 50 for the trio when he hurled his twentieth win on Saturday, and Walberg boosted it to 51 with his fifteenth triumph in the second game the same day. Earnshaw has won 16. The three have lost only 12 games—two by Grove and five each by Earnshaw and Walberg.

THOUGH THE PITT football schedule for next fall is the hardest in Panther history, Coach Jock Sutherland will have to send his squad into action with the shortest training season in many years behind it. Not only has the fall conditioning been cut down a week by the athletic council but spring practice also was curtailed.

The Panthers will spend only two weeks at Camp Hamilton, instead of three, as heretofore, and last spring they got in less than 20 days' work. If Coach Sutherland had only the average schedule to face he would not be severely handicapped by this lack of preparatory time, but to defeat the tough Iowa team in the second game on the program it may be necessary for him to have his outfit clicking in almost mid-season form.

Dr. J. B. Sutherland

HOWEVER, THE PITT coach may proceed on the policy that it will be better to risk a loss to the Hawkeyes than to run chances on the injuries that sometimes result when an undertrained team is pushed too hard, particularly as Greasy Neale's probably improved West Virginia eleven must be met one week later at the Stadium. Pitt will have one advantage over Iowa in the fact that the preceding game with the rugged Miami aggregation may give Dr. Sutherland a line on the condition and ability of his 1931 team. The Iowans will go into battle with the same amount of training behind them, but minus the opportunity of showing their possibilities against opposition strong enough to prove a real test.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF LAST SATURDAY. JOE VOSMIK—Vosmik, leftfielder for the Cleveland Indians, is regarded as the most sensational young player to break into the major leagues since Ty Cobb. Making his debut in April, 1931, in 77 times at bat he connected for 14 hits—including 5 doubles, 2 triples and a homer—for six runs, making an average of .636 in the first five days of play. And he's still batting around .350. THE SCHOOLHOUSE WINDOWS THAT ARE NEVER OPENED—The public high school in Calipatria, Cal., is the lowest in the world, being situated 185 feet below sea level, in the Imperial Valley of Southern California. The windows of the building have been built solid, ventilation being taken care of by a special system which dries and warms the air in the winter and cools and moistens the air in the spring and early summer.

Having thrown the Robins for a [illegible] loss the Pirates today were [illegible] to get at those Giants. McGraw's team reached the city this morning, the Polo Grounders being the last of the four Baseball clubs to invade the Oakland Orchard.

The Bucs made themselves a first-division factor as they won five of their six battles with the Robins. They capped a big week Saturday by taking a sensational doubleheader from the Flatbush crew. Larry French beated Fred Heimach in a 14-inning classic that marked the nightcap. Charly Wood turned in a neat victory over Dolf Luque in the opener.

FOUR-GAME SERIES

The Freebooters spent yesterday in All-after whether they [illegible] peved for exhibition purposes. They are slated to open a four-game [illegible] with the Men of McGraw this afternoon.

Rene Kremer is likely to work the [illegible] battle with the Giants. Kremer appears to be having more hard luck than any pitcher in the National League, yet the adversity does not seem to lessen the quality of his slab work. He may be opposed today by Left-hander Clarence Mitchell.

The Eastmen have a fine slate to show after clashing with three of the eastern rivals. They have copped no less than 10 of the 14 fights. Four out of six were gained in competition with the Quakers, the home guards splitting a doubleheader with the Braves. Rain prevented the other two contests scheduled with the Tribe. The rare accomplishment of the Bucco while contesting with Uncle Robbie made their card look very impressive.

BATTING IMPROVES

A distinctive improvement in batting to blend with the fine pitching which the Pirates sharpshooters have displayed through most of the season enabled the Freebooters to show to such a good advantage. The offensive work of Capt. Pie Traynor has been particularly pleasing. Traynor was in a severe slump, like other regulars, but in the past week Sommerville Pie has been an outstanding star. His batting and baserunning are amazing and he always hustles.

The collective hitting of the team has picked up by leaps and bounds since Pie and some of his mates have come into their own at the plate. The fielding of the club too has improved. Grantham's brilliance at first base being a big high point in the play of the team.

WARNER WINS BERLIN RACE

BERLIN, [illegible] 27.—(AP)—Lilles Ladoumegue, French middle-distance ace, defeated Dr. Otto Peltzer in a 1,000-meter run featuring an international meet under the auspices of the Sport Club of Charlottenburg here yesterday.

Ladoumegue was timed in 2.25 3-10, one and nine-tenths seconds slower than his own record time. Dave Cobb, Harvard star, finished third.

Karl Warner, of Yale, won the 400-meter event in 49 4-10 seconds. Helmut Koernig captured the 100 meters in 10 8-10 seconds.

The listed world record for 1,000 meters was set by Dr. Peltzer at 2.25 8-10 in 1927. Ladoumegue, however, was timed in 2.23 4-10 at Paris, October 19, 1930.

P. A. A. GOLFERS AT DETROIT

Golfers representing the Tenpin Bowling League of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association left yesterday for Detroit, where its members will compete at the Tam O'Shanter Club course with similar teams from the athletic clubs of Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo.

The local teams include W. B. Secrist, S. A. Johnson, G. S. McKee, P. C. Harper, H. C. Cushwa, George Ormiston, I. W. Danforth, Walter Williams, C. L. Beares, Jr., Ray Finger, Ray Holtz, E. C. Brainard, T. A. Achenfelder and Ken C. Witherow.

PA STRIBLING INDIGNANT

[illegible] the New York Boxing Commission [illegible] recommended Aleibar of W. L. [illegible] suspended at Jacksonville on [illegible] of a [illegible] percentage agreement between the promoters and to declare that at the proper time he will start agitation for a match between W. L. and Mickey Walker.

SPORT VIGNETTES

If those Pirates don't quit winning pretty soon they'll be having to give testimonials for breakfast foods, underwear and other articles [illegible] to insure success . . . No one can figure out what's got into the boys unless someone tipped them off that they were playing those funny Brooklyn fellows over the week-end . . . France still is in its [illegible] the Davis Cup in this instance . . . By reason of having been able to work the magic of pulling out the Bunny Austin from the British threat . . . Speaking of magic, the Brooklyn Robins certainly have plenty of it what with Thurston pitching and Babe Herman the Great also in the cast.

Dick Goldberg, former Pitt football star and later local sandlot football and baseball player, is going great guns for the Topeka club, whither he has been farmed by the Washington Senators, and is headed for a return trial in the big show. . . . He is a first baseman and one of the leading long-distance sluggers of the league.

Rowe Cutri, who may be the regular quarterback on the Pitt eleven next fall, is sun-tanning in California . . . And John Luchini of Jimmy Clark for the fullbacking job, is down to 190 pounds and in fine fettle to buck those Army, Notre Dame and Nebraska lines, not to mention that of his public enemy, West Virginia . . . Luch still remembers the game he played against the West Virginia freshmen a few seasons ago, which developed into an endurance contest between himself and the entire West Virginia team, with the latter winning by several minutes . . . He wants to get even, if possible.

Cool Breeze is the name of a Negro boxer fighting out of Leiperville, Pa., believe it or not. . . . Only two of the writers who covered the Jim Jeffries-Jack Johnson bout at Reno, July 4, 1910, were on duty there exactly 21 years later, last July 4, when Jack Dempsey staged his Paulino Uzcudun-Max Baer 20-rounder. . . . They were Harry Smith, of the San Francisco Chronicle, and Harry Carr, of the Los Angeles Times. . . . Those Harrys last a long time, it seems.

The best boxing card in Erie is young Frankie Bojorski, the southpaw lightweight, who is good for a $2,000 gate almost any time he starts, which is good money for a small town in these parlous times. He has yet to lose a fight in 40 starts and it is becoming increasingly difficult for Promoter Jack Barry to secure opponents for him. Bojorski is a farmer boy who sticks to the great outdoors and comes to town only for his fights and then does so in his farm clothes, including overalls and high-top shoes. . . . He milks the cows and does other chores besides his training. . . . He meets Billy Wallace at Erie next Friday night and is a visitor in Pittsburgh today.

Most of the fans don't remember it, but little Jackie Wilson, Johnny Ray's Negro bantamweight, has boxed Mose Butch three times. . . . He holds a win over Jimmy Thomas, has knocked out Jack Benton and has boxed Ross Fields and Sammy Paris, among others, and deserves some consideration among the local 116-pounders—HARRY KECK.

Sutherland Opens Summer Grid Class

Coach Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, opened his annual summer coaching school this morning at the Pitt Stadium. The course will be given over a period of two weeks.

Today's session lasted only a short time, Coach Sutherland giving a short talk, in which he covered briefly the general outline of the course. A good sized turnout was on hand.

Sports Editor

This is Ted Yarosz Night at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, with the young Monaca welterweight stepping out into the Big Time against an opponent of national prominence in the person of Bucky Lawless of Auburn, N. Y. All Lawless has done has been to win two bouts with Young Jack Thompson, the world welterweight champion, and beat practically every other welterweight of any note in the land. He has performed at Motor Square Garden three times, departing with decisions over Buck McTiernan, Paul Pirrone and Pete Susky.

Ted Yarosz

Bucky Lawless

Lest anyone get the notion that young Ted Yarosz is a brash young fellow stepping in over his head, let it be stated here and now that he has had 45 professional fights in the last two years and never has had a decision turned in against him. Outside of that he hardly knows his way around a ring. He grabbed himself off the Lawless battle by winning over Buck McTiernan in the Hickey Park ring several weeks ago, and has been in there with a lot of other good ones.

ROOTERS WITH HIM

Ted will have his Beaver Valley rooting delegation with him tonight. It's almost a Yarosz Marching Club, so loyal is this little band of followers. His bout with McTiernan was postponed twice and they made the trip to Millvale in a body on all three nights. And did they make the well-known welkin ring!

Tiger Joe Randall, Negro welterweight of Elizabeth, takes the place of Billy Holt, of Homewood, who is injured, against Billy Rose, clever Cincinnatian, in the eight-round semi-final. Matty Oldach, of Erie, and Meyer Frager, of the North Side, box the second bout and Melody Jackson, Negro bantamweight of St. Louis, meets Al Jovino Swissvale southpaw in the opener at 8:45.

Between Rounds

Bucky Burdach, manager of Buck McTiernan, welterweight middleweight is on the warpath again. He claims Jimmy Belmont of Braddock is trying to run out of an agreement to meet McTiernan again in his next start in the event he defeated Burke in their battle at the Bowl last Monday night, and is planning to take on another opponent there on August 17. Bunny plans to take the matter before the boxing commission for an airing. The contract for their recent clash included a clause in which Belmont agreed to the return bout and, while it did not stipulate a date, Burdach says there was a gentlemen's agreement involving himself, Frank Klaus, Belmont's manager, and the Meyers Bowl management, and he holds that the fact that McTiernan was winning off by him don't count, he was ripped with a knockout in the fourth round, makes the return engagement extraordinarily attractive.

The yard has been completed for the James Rosatire show at Hickey Park with the signing of Billy Brent, Bill Negro middleweight, and Jimmy Taylor, Cleveland blond, for the eight-round semi-final, and Joey Kaltish, of Lawrenceville, and Johnny Warren, of Clairton, for the second preliminary. Don Aste and Al Yon form a fill turn professional against each other in the first bout.

The tall Rosy Rosatire, the Mexican border fight heavyweight who boxes Billy Jones of Philadelphia in the main bout at Hickey Park Millvale Thursday night, the Big Pagoose. He is not a flash boxer by any means, but has won and has an unbroken record against good opponents. His loss was and lost in two 10-rounders with Jones fought in Erie in 1929, and is anxious to get the edge in their rubber match.

PUBLIC PARKS PLAY OPENS

West will be on hand at their respective stations this afternoon to receive entrants as the latter report for jousting. Courts will be assigned as fast as rivals can be paired off together and, before darkness descends, it is hoped that great inroads will be made into first-round programs at all six parks.

Current plans call for completion of every initial bracket tilt and a goodly number of second-stanza fracases by dusk tomorrow evening. This means that netmen must co-operate to the utmost with tourney officials by appearing for frays as early as possible where definite hour of activity has not been set and promptly on schedule in cases where a stated time is fixed.

Unless such high degree of courtesy is observed, it is very probable that complications involving necessity of scoring defaults against tardy performers will arise.

TOUGH TILTS CARDED

Under the seeded draw system few outstanding flagon-seekers will be compelled to tangle with each other in the inaugural canto. Despite this fact, however, the opening bill evokes promise of considerable fast scrimmaging. Defending champion Frank Broida, having copped a bye for a starter, initiates determined campaign to retain his throne by taking on Bernhard Manheimer, clever Frick Parker, in stanza two.

Regis Bullion, Duke varsity flash and second in the Frick rating, tussles from scratch and encounters Max Hausrath at the outset. Another likely-looking Frick debate brings together the Wilkinsburg High School teammates, Bob Burnett and Jim Grier.

Ranking luminaries of Schenley get under way with stiff opposition. Herb Lomask, 1930 runner-up on the Murdoch avenue lot, meeting F. E. Braemer, brother of the redoubtable Sam Braemer, and Alex Blumberger, seeded number two, tangling with a newcomer, James Khalil Zola Alpert, third in the select quota, may find trouble with Louis Singer, while Rege Breen, seeded seventh, is apt to find a capable foe in Joe Tucker.

REDMOND PLAYS SMITH

Jack Redmond, Highland high man, goes to bat against Art Smith in inning one, while Bill Purcell, Duke freshman satellite, and four of the Stanton-Avenue chosen array, catches a tough one at the very face-off in Erwin Beck.

Bill Creighton and Ward Murphy, top and second Olympia entrants, run afoul of two less experienced cavorters in Tom Rooney and Billy Benz, respectively, but Jack Rosen, fourth of the Hilltoppers, will be troubled by Ralph Baker.

Emanuel Bruder, seeded third on the Mount, is booked for imbroglio with Ralph Sniveley. This seance, however, may go by the board, as there is question over Sniveley's eligibility because of alleged affiliation with the Rockwood Tennis Club.

MEYER, McCLERKIN CLASH

Bob Meyer, ace of Riverview, mingles with a clever rival in Robert McClerkin to pry open the North Hills milling, while Louis Buran, seeded three, grabs off dangerous bracket one opposition in E. J. Plunkett, and Howard Kleeb, listed at four, tries conclusions with S. A. McCorkle in an affair that holds forth possibility of fireworks.

Little is known of the calibre of the numerous hopefuls registering debuts at West Park, luck of the draw assigning Ed. Schafer against Karl Beilstein, 1930 Lake Elizabeth area premier, and stacking up J. F. Mulach, Jr., with Beilstein's formidable older brother, Ralph.

Players are reminded to be prepared to display Pittsburgh City Parks tennis permits to committeemen in charge at the respective centers—with which admonition and a "Good luck to all!" we leave the rest of the story on the lap of the racquet gods.

BULLOCK GOLF VICTOR

DEL MONTE, Cal., July 27.—(AP.)—Capt. A. Bullock Webster today was the winner of the Pebble Beach golf tournament, defeating Jack Neville, 2 up. Both are former California state amateur champions.

HORTON SMITH WINS OPEN

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 27.—(AP.)—Horton Smith finally overtook his notorious jinx by capturing the $10,000 St. Paul open golf championship yesterday with a 72-hole total of 278 shots, 10 under par for the championship Keller Club layout.

The erstwhile "Joplin Ghost"—now of Detroit—came back with mighty rounds of 69-69-67-73 to breeze home with the title and $2,500 prize money by a three-stroke margin over the defending champion, Harry Cooper, of Chicago.

It was the finest score since the advent of the new balloon ball.

Trailing Smith by six shots in a deadlock for third place were George Von Elm and Walter Hagen, who is making a stirring comeback. Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del., who topped the par-breaking field at 36 holes by two shots over Smith and Von Elm, couldn't keep up his pace and fell into fifth place with 285.

Smith's winning 72-hole card:

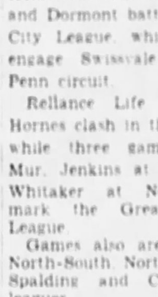
Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Uncle Nick now rises to tell you school kiddies that the American League race isn't over any more than the human race.



Nick Altrock

The A's are now in front, but we will overhaul them for the following reasons:

In 1914 the Germans chased the capital of France from Paris to Bordeaux, but the Allies still won the war.

In 1916 Hughes was elected President by the morning papers. But Wilson was inaugurated the following March.

And in 1276 B. C. the tortoise beat out the hare in a foot race. We have only got to dope out how to make the Athletics take a nap.

COCHET HERO AS FRANCE KEEPS CUP

AUTEUIL, France, July 27.—(AP.)—In a last-minute blaze of glory, France won the Davis Cup for the fifth consecutive year. She beat back a determined bid by Great Britain in the challenge round, three matches to two, to assert once more her world tennis superiority.

It was the uncanny tennis brains of little Henri Cochet which kept the cup—more bowl than cup—from crossing the English Channel. In the first of the final two singles matches, Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, of Britain, had whipped the facing Basque veteran, Jean Borotra, 7-5, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5, and brought the series count to two all. That left the issue squarely up to Cochet.

Far off his usual form in his two previous cup matches and beaten earlier in the season by two lesser players, Cochet did what 10,000 wildly excited tennis fans expected of him and beat the big Briton, Frederick J. Perry, in the deciding match, 6-4, 1-6, 9-7, 6-3.

France thus, for the fourth successive year, successfully defended the cup it won from the United States at Germantown in 1927.

Borotra again was only a shadow of the man who used to fight Big Bill Tilden. At the start, it seemed the Basque had learned something from his defeat by Perry on Friday and was going to play a less strenuous game in order to conserve his strength. But before the second game of the opening set was over, it was evident the friendly Frenchman still was fatigued from the pounding Perry gave him.

As the match ended, flying red cushions filled the air. From somewhere came the tunes of "La Marseillaise" and "God Save the King." Two huskies hoisted Cochet onto their shoulders and haled him off the court.

The Davis Cup was France's for another year.

O'DOUL BALKS AT FINE

CINCINNATI, July 27.—(INS.)—More trouble for President John A. Heydler's umpire system appeared today. Frank J. (Lefty) O'Doul refuses to take yesterday's $100 fine imposed upon him by the league head without making himself heard.

Upon receipt of Heydler's telegram the fiery Brooklyn outfielder announced he intended filing a protest and bringing in more than a score of Pittsburgh fans as witnesses to the decisions of Umpire Charles Donnelly.

O'Doul, who was put out of the game by Donnelly in Pittsburgh Saturday, promptly secured the signatures and addresses of about 20 persons who expressed themselves as eager to offer testimony on the decision. Heydler's wire told O'Doul the fine was imposed and payment expected within five days "for violation of playing rules and obscene language to the umpire."

O'Doul is not alone in his vociferous complaint about Donnelly's work in the Robins-Pirates series. Manager Wilbert Robinson wired his views on the decisions to President Heydler before leaving Pittsburgh.

LARGE ENTRY AT FIELD CLUB

Reservations are being received at the Pittsburgh Field Club for its big mixed two-ball foursome tourney, to be held at the Aspinwall course Friday. A dinner-dance is to follow in the evening. A large field is anticipated.

Leo Heyn, of the Summit Golf Club, near Uniontown, reports the entry list for Saturday's qualifying round for amateurs who, on August 8, will team up on the same layout with Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell, former National open champions, is increasing daily, and may swell above the 100 mark. While the Summit club is a member of the W. P. G. A., the lists are not closed to amateurs who are members of clubs not affiliated with that body, Heyn says. Edith Hopwood has been made hostess at Summit.

To Resign?

DONNIE BUSH

Former manager of the Pirates, who today was called upon to deny reports that he is to step down as pilot of the Chicago White Sox.

MARSTON WINS FIFTH TIME

EASTERN POINT, Conn., July 27.—(AP.)—Max R. Marston, of Philadelphia, won the Shennecossett Club invitation golf tournament yesterday for the fifth time in six years by defeating E. L. Beard, Jr., of Flushing, N. Y., in the final 3 and 2.

PERKINS WINS TITLE

ROCHESTER, July 27.—(AP.)—T. Philip Perkins, of New York, former British amateur champion, yesterday won the New York amateur golf championship from Jack Mackie, of Inwood, Long Island, 5 up and 4 to go. Perkins was 1 up at the end of the morning 18 holes.

CHICAGO RUMOR HAS DONIE THROUGH

NEW YORK, July 27.—(AP.)—Donie Bush, manager of the Chicago White Sox, today denied he intended to resign due to the club's poor showing.

"I have no intention of quitting, now or at the end of the season," Bush told the Associated Press. "My two-year contract expires with this season, but I have not talked with the club about its renewal. I have had no discussion at all about next year, nor given anybody any suggestion I would be ready to step out.

"My only kick is we haven't enough pitchers, but except for the Athletics and possibly the Washington and Cleveland clubs, I guess everybody has that complaint."

The White Sox have been especially handicapped in the box by the failure to round into form of Ted Lyons, who won 22 games last season.

DONIE THROUGH, REPORT

CHICAGO, July 27.—(AP.)—The Herald and Examiner said today Donie Bush would resign as manager of the White Sox at the end of the season.

Bush, former pilot of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Washington Senators and Indianapolis Indians of the American Association, is in his second year as manager of the Sox.

The Sox have just struggled out of eighth place after a long term in the cellar.

Bush's two-year contract expires in October.

The Sox went to New York facing six games in four days against a club they had not defeated all season. In view of that prospect, Bush kept Pat Caraway in two games from which he should have been relieved earlier in the week. At the time it was believed to have been a measure of discipline on account of suspected indifference on Caraway's part. It later developed that overwork has cost him his cunning.

The home office has booked an exhibition game with Newark, N. J., Thursday. Smead Jolley, an outfielder, has offered to pitch it.

Reports that the club has abandoned all organized scouting activities in the minor leagues, except for one man in Texas, were unconfirmed.

QUIT HERE IN 1929

Donie Bush, former manager of the Pirates, who obtained him from the Indianapolis Club, of the American Association, after he had had a trial as manager of the Washington Senators, resigned his local post shortly before the end of the 1929 season, being succeeded by Jewel Ens, who still remains on the job here.

Bush is a former major league playing star, having been the shortstop of the late Hughey Jennings' famous Detroit Tigers. He played in the 1909 world series against the Pirates.

The [illegible] sidering [illegible] healthy. [illegible] must be regarded as a [illegible] and it is henceforth the major job of central bankers everywhere to use every factor at their command to start counter-deflationary forces at work.

Arresting mad destructive deflationary influences should not be confused with inflation. Both inflation and deflation disturb existing contracts and the relationships between creditors and debtors. Under an ideal money economy there would be comparative stability of commodity and interest rates, instead of the vast and disturbing fluctuations which in the long run penalize the steady members of the community and benefit only a small minority of speculators.

U. S. 'HANDS OFF' IN WAGE CUT

WASHINGTON, July 27. (INS.)—Many industries are faced with the necessity of reducing wages or otherwise curtailing their operations, it was admitted today by officials of the Department of Commerce. However, they said, it is not the policy of the government to intervene in such cases nor did he think such interference would be desirable.

Taking a view of the current situation which was contained in a letter addressed to Representative Clinton Dear of Rhode Island who had written President Hoover concerning wage-cutting activities, Hoover referred the matter to Lamont.

Lamont pointed out that the President's views on wage reductions are well known and understood. He cited the conference of business leaders in 1929 where representatives from various industries expressed themselves in favor of maintaining wage levels. He added that these industries have maintained wage rates that are in effect two years ago and the influence of the conference and its conclusion has succeeded in a marvelous manner in sustaining wages.

WASHINGTON, July 27. The Treasury Department is offering $60,000,000 91-day bills dated August 3.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

[illegible]

Stocks finished last week practically at the low levels of the decline from the June recovers top. Through entraged in more or less aimless drift, stocks gave up about 3 average points in the course of the week as measured by the Standard Statistics Company index of 90 active issues. The market rallied from the June 2 bear market low of 90.8 for this average, to a high of 122.1 on June 27, that level marking the top of the recent rise in motion by the Hoover moratorium proposal. At the close Friday night the index stood at 110.7, or just about a point above the July 15 low of 109.6. In other words the market shown no little change at the closing Saturday has given up about 47 per cent of the 26.2 points rise in the index scored from the early June low to the late June top.

The new week will bring a series of meetings of directors of important corporations for dividend actions. In addition to the meeting of the Steel corporation scheduled for Tuesday afternoon there will be actions by the American Tobacco Company, Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Columbian Carbon Company, Consolidated Gas, Illinois Central, Inland Steel, Nickel Plate, Standard of California, Standard of New Jersey, Studebaker Corporation and the Coca Cola Company. In fact the dividend actions of the major corporations will be pretty well out of the way when the week draws to a closing.

A total of $59,728,740 bonds and notes of domestic and foreign corporations fall due in August, compilation by reliable authority reveals. This figure is substantially under the total of $75,298,580, which came to maturity in the current month and $72,615,550, which fell due in August last year. Of the aggregate $56,042,740 is represented by obligations of domestic corporations, compared with $57,856,730 this month and $59,856,380 this month. Railroads will have to provide for maturities totaling $9,080,950, with industrial and utility corporations each faced with taking care of about the same amount, namely, $25,111,790 industrials and $22,851,500 utilities. Foreign maturities total $2,685,000 next month.

In the first 26 weeks of 1931 [illegible] its margin of [illegible] in face of [illegible] per cent reduction in dollar sales volume from the like period of 1930 and was able to increase this margin by an amount sufficient to absorb the cost of developing seven more truck routes than were added in the first 26 weeks of 1930. The company, in the report covering 26 weeks to July 11, probably will report net profit in excess of $775,000, or a decline of only about 12 per cent from the record net reported in the first 26 weeks of 1930. This would be equal to more than $2.75 a share on 280,000 shares and would cover dividend requirements for the half year of $560,000 at the current $4 annual rate. Net in the first 26 weeks of 1930 was equal to $3.17 a capital share.

National Steel Corporation will probably be the only major steel company to earn more than its dividend requirement in the first half of 1931, its earnings for this period being substantially in excess of the $1 disbursement on the capital stock. Despite the hangover of depressed industrial conditions and the completion of a $50,500,000 construction program, National Steel has earned over its 50-cent dividend requirement in each quarterly period since its organization at the end of 1929. In steel circles National Steel's ability to maintain its earning power under present conditions is attributed to the strategic location of its plants at Detroit and Weirton, W. Va., giving them water transportation and short [illegible] to [illegible] ore mines to finished products.

CAUTION STILL RULES STOCK MARKET

List Continues to Drift Listlessly; Rails Heavy, Steel Shows Point Gain

NEW YORK, July 27. (AP.)—The new week in Wall street began with caution still the dominant note.

The stock market continued to drift listlessly. Rails and some of the specialties were rather heavy, but in the main leading industrials held up well. Apparent checking of the flow of gold from London to Paris and expectation of early resumption of more normal banking activity in Germany were reassuring. International bankers were not prepared to place any immediate interpretation upon the change of government in Chile.

The stock market was held in check by the approach of United States Steel's quarterly meeting tomorrow afternoon. After an early sag U. S. Steel common rallied to show a gain of a point.

So far as is known here American properties in Chile have not been particularly affected by the change in government.

Wall street had been somewhat perturbed by the flow of gold from London to Paris, and witnessed the strengthening of sterling exchange today with considerable satisfaction. Sterling exchange on both New York and Paris attained levels at which old shipments would be unprofitable but the margin of safety was not wide.

Interest in the controversy over maintenance of wage scales was revived by news that Secretary of Commerce Lamont had written a Rhode Island member of Congress that the lengthening of the depression had imposed difficulties for corporations not well protected by reserves.

Second quarter earnings statements are reflecting the effects of rigid economies in many instances. One tabulation of the results of the second quarter for 107 industrial concerns shows a gain of about 40 per cent over the first quarter, and a shrinkage of nearly 23 per cent from the like period of last year. This evidently includes many small concerns however, and is far from a complete picture.

Ohio Oil Company Advances Crude

FINDLAY, O., July 27.—Effective as of July 25, Ohio Oil Company has advanced market prices of Elk Basin, Grass Creek crude oils 18 cents a barrel; Big Muddy, Lance Creek and Rock Creek, 20 cents per barrel, and Sunburst 10 cents a barrel. The Salt Creek crudes were advanced Saturday.

Dawes Retains Post With Merged Banks

CHICAGO, July 27.—The Central Trust Company and National Bank of the Republic of Chicago merger has been approved.

Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, honorary chairman of the board of the Central Trust, retains the same post in the new bank. Philip R. Clarke is president.

JUST PLAYING AROUND -:- By Lewis Allen Browne

Susie Lawlor Invites Kitty To Week-End Party

CHAPTER XXVII

I didn't like the way poor Peter Thompson insisted, in all seriousness, that I was crazy about playing around.

In the first place I felt sorry for Peter because I knew that I couldn't settle down as the wife of a small-town plumber.

I talked it over with Viola when I got home.

"I don't think I have ever seen that childhood sweetie of yours," she said.

You have changed, anything. He's a big strong chap with fine wavy black hair, but he's a plumber. His hands are black and greasy. He thinks a swell time is to go to the movies and sit off at the delicatessen afterward, having some sauerkraut, wieners and cheese.

Viola smiled and then was serious again.

"If ever I really fell for a guy it wouldn't matter to me whether he was a captain of industry or an unemployed man," she declared.

"You are crazy as the fabled hare who used a stop watch on a small race," Viola cried, laughing at the very idea of it. "Imagine!" I went on, a picture of me in a little semi-built bungalow out in some muddy barren development, washing Peter's great leather cranking his rusted Ford, quench and spuds are going to be last."

"It pictures a rather lonely life. What a thing that would be."

"I'm sure we'd. Peter's very keen with the right girl," she said, philosophically.

DIFFERENT IDEAS

After a few more trips, week-ends, after nights of theatres and dances, night-club thrills, big dinners at the St. Regis and Plaza and Ritz, sporting nights at leisure at twenty-five a seat, imagine living in the sticks and getting a thrill in seeing what your neighbor is hanging out for the week's wash.

"Yeah? I'm the other side of there," Viola said quietly.

"What do you mean, the other side?"

"Imagine the right man for a husband, maybe babies in your arms and a home of your own. No job to me. I may have a headache and nerves, and a man working and ready for you."

I stared at her.

"If I didn't know you so well," I said, "I almost believe you."

"Then you don't know me so well," Viola answered.

"Who is he?"

Viola grinned.

"I haven't found him. When I do I won't be mistaken and let him go. I'll throw myself at him so hard I'll stun him and drag him to the altar before he can get away."

"Thanks," I said dryly, for I began to believe her and this was a new side of Viola to me at that time, as for me "I'll just play around and live life as it is meant to be lived."

Viola reached up and put out the light, settling down to sleep.

Everyone to her own taste, as the old woman said who kissed her cow, she murmured.

ATTENDS PARTY

Part of the time Chubb was up at the Provincial in Quebec for the winter sports. Forrest wasn't back from abroad. It was a little bit dull. Dreaming Viola and I would go out with some of the Miers customers in the West, but they weren't so hot. They didn't know the live places the way Thad and Chubb, Forrest and a few others of our friends did. Dennis Thurston went around with Viola now and then, but she wasn't crazy about him.

I happened to meet Susie Lawlor when I was doing a little Saturday noon shopping. She seemed delighted to see me. Her first words were: "I thought I'd die in hysterics when I heard what you did to Arline Parsons."

"Who told you?" I asked.

"I heard all about it from Mr. Sanders; he was my lawyer, too. I met him down at Pinehurst."

It is rather funny now, but I was scared after I got into it, I confessed.

"My dear, I'm back for the rest of the winter and am planning some nice little parties out at the Long Island place. Please come and bring Viola with you. There won't be any fool husband to watch and be a killjoy. I won't have any guests pitying me because friend husband is having some affair under my very nose. I'm quite free and the sky will be the limit."

"That sounds good to me, Susie. It has been rather dull lately. Drop me a line and I'll get all Saturday off and be there Friday night with a whole set of chimes jangling," I assured her.

Susie was true to her word. Two weeks later we got a nice invitation. Mrs. Miers let us have Saturday forenoon off so we could go out in an early train Friday evening.

I knew more than half the guests. I had met them there before. Dennis Dutton was along, but Chubb hadn't returned and I hadn't heard from Forrest for two weeks, when he sent me a gorgeous mandarin coat. It came to me through Forrest's lawyer, who had paid duty on it and delivered it to me according to instructions. I brought it along to Susie's "sky's-the-limit" party.

At first it seemed rather tame. An English chap, Morgan Nelson, who had been everywhere, was entertaining and got rather chummy with me right from the start.

FORREST ARRIVES

There was the usual amount of liquor and a jolly midnight feast with plenty of dancing and a little card playing and crap shooting. I didn't gamble. I couldn't get a kick out of it.

The party was gay enough, but somehow I didn't get much of a kick out of it. Neither did Viola.

Susie was to have a jazz band down the next day and another dozen lively guests were due, some for over night and some just neighbors.

I was down stairs taking a constitutional in the long sun porch by noon the next day. Only a few more were up at that hour. I had been too wise to take many drinks and felt fine. A big car came up the winding driveway. I watched to see what the first of the new guests would be like.

Just one man got out. I took a second look.

It was Forrest Malvern!

I didn't even know he was back from Europe!

"Forrest!" I cried.

"Sweetheart!" he answered and he grabbed me, lifted me up and kissed me.

"I knew you were here," he said, and I telephoned Susie an hour ago to ask me out."

"Yes, you knew I was here," I said, doubting him.

"Got in before sunset last night and hot-footed it for your place. Nobody home. Telephoned Miers this morning at 10 and learned where you were—how's that?" he demanded.

"That's just as it should be, Forrest. Gee, I've missed you," I said, and I meant it.

"Just for that——"

He grabbed me and kissed me again.

While he was shown to the room Susie assigned him Viola came down and joined me at my breakfast.

"Forrest is here!" I cried.

"Malvern?"

"No one else—but gee, I'm glad."

"I'm glad you're glad," she said rather dourly.

"Aw, for cat's sake, Viola, why do you dislike him?"

"I don't know. Forget it," and she wouldn't say any more.

We had a gorgeous time that day. There was just enough snow for snowballing and Susie had the tennis courts sprayed and frozen so we could skate.

THOMPSON ON JOB

It was around 5 o'clock when we came in and joined the others who preferred bridge and booze to the outdoor life.

"The pool is fixed—how about a plunge before we dress for dinner?" Susie called.

I was running for our room in a moment, Viola following.

We were the first ones down and we dashed down the long sun porch, through the hall and out to the big room where the swimming pool was located.

"First in," I cried and in I went, swimming across and climbing up the other side. The edge was slippery and I would have fallen back if someone hadn't grabbed me. Viola was below at the edge by this time.

I shook the water out of my eyes and there stood Peter Thompson in his working clothes, a tool kit at his feet.

I knew in a flash how it happened. He had been sent for to repair the pool.

"Why, hello, Peter," I exclaimed.

Others were trooping in, screaming and yelling.

"You don't want these people to think you are friendly with a working man," he said, a trifle sarrastically.

"Sure I do, Peter," I insisted. "Well, I don't want anyone to think I am friendly with them," he said, gruffly, "and Katie there isn't one of your crowd good enough for you to wipe your feet on!"

(Does Viola know something about Forrest Malvern she doesn't tell Katy? Read tomorrow's interesting installment).

DAILY SHORT STORY

Wild West Stuff

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Author Objects to Daughter Marrying Artist

J. Miller Mason heard his daughter, Judith, enter his workroom. He wheeled about from his typewriter and spoke.

"Have a heart, Jude, go away. I'm right in the midst of having my hero standing with his back to a purple mesa, fighting off seven greasers."

Mesas are not purple, only the sunsets make them seem so dad, and are you sure a man can lean against a mesa?"

"Up to your old tricks, trying to get me to talk by starting an argument about what I'm writing, but please——"

"Did you ever lean against a mesa, dad?"

"I have, so trot along like a dear. I'm behind with this story now the magazine people are yelping for two more instalments by tomorrow."

"Oh well, I'll trot. It was only to ask your advice about Clarence."

J. Miller Mason had turned to his machine again, but at this he turned right back again and frowned.

"Clarence Podsdick?"

He practically shorted as he spoke the name.

"Yes, that's Clarence's full name, dad, and I wanted——"

"I am not giving you any advice about that sap. I'm telling you, Jude, just as I've told you before, and what I am telling you to do is to help yourself to a good hearty laugh over his nerve in wanting to marry you, then forget him and find yourself some regular guy, a nice big he man."

"Clarence is three inches taller and 15 pounds heavier than you, dad, and I like him and—and—oh, why can't you be reasonable about him?"

"I am."

CORRECTS ENGLISH

"You are not!"

"But look at him, a designer he designs dress goods patterns and such piffle, taking the work away from some sweet little old maid, who is the only sort fit for such stuff. He sits at his desk——"

"Drawing board, dad."

"He sits and draws curlycues and doo-dads and whiffle-whaffles to go on dress goods, now isn't that a helluva career?"

"You sit all day and make up lies about heroes and heroines out West, who never lived, what's the difference?"

"I write good red-blooded action stuff, high adventure, stories of regular men and brave women out in the open spaces——"

"I know, where the impossible heroes want their whisky wild and their women straight, and you get about half as much for your work as Clarence does for his. Why, when he trademarks or copyrights or something a design he get money from all over from manufacturers who want to use his design and have to pay him royalties or something per yard or bolt——"

Judith paused for breath.

"——or something," her father finished.

Anyway Clarence is all right and I have promised to marry him."

"Promised—you——"

J. Miller Mason paused for thought. Several plans came to him.

Let me think it over, Jude," he said, quietly.

Go to it, and be nice to him tonight. I've invited him over for dinner."

ARRIVES FOR DINNER

Mason recalled the old assertion that by trying to keep a couple apart one drew them together.

"I won't bite him or say 'Boo' and frighten him," he promised.

Jude went her merry way, which was merely out to the tennis court back of the suburban home to play with one of the neighbor's adoring but fearfully adolescent sons.

Clarence Podsdick came over to dinner that night as per Judith's schedule. J. Miller Mason greeted him with sufficient politeness but there was a smouldering light of disapproval in his eyes. Podsdick was so sartorially perfect that it annoyed Mason.

Mason's hair was brushed hurriedly, his black tie with his dinner suit was awry and he had been hurried with his shaving so that dashes of after-shaving talcum did not hide patches of skipped stubble.

Podsdick's every hair was gleamingly in place, his dinner jacket seemed to have been poured over him. His long white fingers were tipped with perfectly-manicured nails.

It made J. Miller Mason nervous and angry, the way Judith seemed to adore Clarence with her large expressive eyes, the way she dimpled her cheeks at him and the way Clarence beamed on her with eyes that were almost caressing in their eloquent gleaming.

"How," said Mason, thinking to take Clarence down a notch, "is the dress goods business?"

"Flourishing, Mr. Mason—and—er—how is the Wild West business?"

Mason reddened a little.

"All I can do," he managed to answer, frowning at Judith, who had inadequately smothered a giggle.

After dinner Mason showed Clarence some of the illustrations in his latest adventure novel.

"That artist knows his business, Podsdick," Mason said, "no soft city men for him, he knows regular he men and how to depict them."

"His 10-gallon hats are all wrong, and imagine having chaps fasten inside the leg," Clarence observed.

"Why, why, I hadn't noticed, didn't know you were acquainted with such things, Podsdick."

"Any kid playing cowboy would know that, ah——"

Clarence got up and went to the wide casement window. He stared at the lily pool in the side garden, where the full moon was reflected.

"This is great, a perfect design for materials for informal garden lounging, if you get what I mean," Clarence said. He produced from his pocket a pencil and an envelope and made some hasty lines. "Got it," he added.

"Sounds damn feminine," Mason growled.

"It is, for to please the feminine mind with my designs is to keep me safely out of the red. I take it for granted that you do not dash off your Wild West stories purely for art's sake, Mr. Mason."

Mason grunted. He excused himself. Judith and Clarence went out on the terrace. Clarence was telling her of a new butterfly design.

"My Gawd, I must stop this," Mason whispered to himself.

And so the next day he hit upon a plan. He did not believe that absence would make the heart grow fonder. He believed that if he could take Judith away from this dress-goods designing Clarence she would soon forget him.

MAKES DECISION

The G. M. G. producers, who bought picture rights to his newest novel, had been after him to go out to the coast and work on the screen adaptation. He had decided not to go, but here was his chance.

Casually next morning he said: "Jude, I've got to run out to Hollywood. I'm going to make the trip by those big coast-to-coast buses. Want to go along and meet some movie stars?"

"Delighted, Dad."

"I'll have this magazine serial done by the end of this week, then we'll start. Aunt Em will run the house here. They'll pay me good money and I can start my new novel between times out there. Mrs. Mooreland, wife of the production manager, whom you have met, will take you everywhere."

Judith told Clarence about it.

"Oh ho, indeed!" said Clarence.

"Now what do you mean, dear?"

"Nothing, except that it will be a nice trip. And when you come back we're going to be married."

"I don't know," Judith answered. Dad——"

"He doesn't approve, eh? Give me the low-down, honey."

Judith told him.

"Cheer up. I'll argue him around when he gets back," Clarence promised.

So J. Miller Mason, the gifted writer of Wild West and red-blooded adventure novels and serials and Judith, his charming daughter, set forth on their trip.

It was the usual trip, enjoyable in spots, tiresome through some of the level Middle West.

They made some restful stop-overs, and just as the big bus with its 28 passengers got into California the chauffeur, rounding a curve slowly, suddenly stopped.

There was a barrier across the highway.

Five men suddenly rode through the thick chaparral into view. They were masked and they were armed.

JUDITH KIDNAPED

"Everyone out and line up, and no monkey business," the leader ordered.

They obeyed.

"My goodness, dad, you're getting some of your own stuff," Judith whispered.

"I haven't got much cash with me, it will be worth it," he agreed.

Four of the men kept the crowd covered. The leader walked down the line, his spurs clanking, his rough chaps rasping as he walked. Between the ten-gallon hat and the mask no one could identify him.

The leader walked down the line, he saw a ring on Judith's finger.

"Come across with that sparkling stone," he ordered.

Judith hesitated. The leader grabbed her by the hand, he lifted her to his saddle, mounted in front and turned back down the road.

For 15 minutes the other four covered the crowd, then suddenly mounted and disappeared in the thick chaparral, one man tossing down a long, white envelope.

It was addressed to:

"J. Miller Mason, Wild West stuff author."

The chauffeur read the name, Mason took the letter and read:

"None of those guns were loaded. If you want to see Judith, come back home and ask for Clarence Podsdick, as we are going back the way I headed you off, by flying. According to your own oft-voiced views, you cannot help but approve of this Wild West stuff.

"CLARENCE PODSDICK,
"Dress Goods Stuff Designer.

May Good Come of It!

There Are Valuable Lessons for Other Institutions in the Fire at the Home for the Aged

The horror aroused by the burning of the Little Sisters of the Poor Home for the Aged, with its heavy loss of life, will not easily be assuaged. It was a shockingly cruel disaster. Perhaps, however, the magnitude of the holocaust and the terrible impression it has produced may ultimately be productive of good.

Is it too much to suggest that the deaths of these unfortunates focusing attention to the absence of things for safety, may lead to the saving of life in other institutions?

The Iroquois Theater fire resulted in the adoption of regulations for the fireproofing of theaters and the protection of audiences.

The loss of the Titanic led to the improvement of life-saving facilities on steamships.

May the destruction of the Home for the Aged not show how hazards may be eliminated from other institutions for the aged and helpless?

There are undoubtedly many valuable lessons in the fire. Let us trust they will be learned and applied.

One lesson is that high walls which may interfere with the work of firemen and rescuers, as those at the Home for the Aged are reported to have interfered, are undesirable.

R. J. Trimble, of the Fire Underwriters' Association, is quoted to the effect that there are in Allegheny County, and presumably elsewhere also, a number of institutions that may be described as "four brick walls filled with lumber." They lack automatic sprinkling systems and other important safety apparatus.

The managers of all institutions housing numerous persons—asylums, hospitals, orphanages, prisons and almshouses—should take warning and make without a day's unnecessary delay the changes that will safeguard their charges from the fate of the victims in the Home for the Aged fire.

They should follow carefully the various investigations that are being made of the disaster and profit by whatever is disclosed that may indicate how they may make their own institutions more safe.

The Landlord's Side

Tenants Who Have Been Shown Consideration Are Told How They May Return the Kindness.

The Pittsburgh Housing Association, which has been carrying on a vigorous campaign to save destitute tenants from eviction, has been giving some attention to the landlord's side of the renting business, with the result that it is now appealing to tenants to do something in return for the kindness they have been shown.

Landlords on the whole have been very forbearing during the last year. They have permitted nonpaying tenants to remain in dwelling houses. Evictions have been few.

There have, however, been some evictions lately. One was due, the association has heard, not to nonpayment of rent, but to the destructiveness of the tenants. This has led the association to suggest to the social service agencies that they ask persons who are behind in the rent to give some time and labor to keeping their dwellings in good condition. The tenant's labor might be charged against rent.

It is a good suggestion. Landlords have taxes and interest to pay. They may lose their property if they derive no rent from it for a long time. The least it would seem, that nonpaying tenants could do to show their appreciation of landlords' forbearance would be to see that the property was maintained to the best of their ability in tiptop condition.

Population Trends

Prediction Made That Soon There Will Be No Further Gains in United States.

The Chicago University press has issued a volume of more than passing interest entitled "Social Changes." It embraces a score of contributions, each by a recognized expert in his field, and among the subjects discussed are population trends, foreign policy, labor, community organization, family, racial relations, rural life and government.

Referring to the population of the United States, the startling fact is asserted that the nation is fast approaching the time when there will be no further gains in population. Each year since 1920, we are told, there has been a drop in the percentage of growth.

In the decade from 1920 to 1930, the population of the United States gained 15 per cent. The estimated gain for the 10 years from 1930 to 1940 is but 7.5 10 per cent.

It is stated, with impressive analysis of facts and figures, that the United States witnessed in the past decade the largest gain in population that will be recorded during the present century.

From many points of view this prediction and the calculations upon which it rests should afford us comfort and reassurance. Mere numerical growth may be a source of weakness to the nation, unless it is accompanied by moral and social assimilation tending steadily to the evolution of a distinct and admirable national type.

The late Dr. Burgess, who occupied the chair of political science at Columbia University for so many years, and with such great distinction, said there were two criteria or tests which a nation should keep before it in determining its policy with regard to the admission of new citizens. These tests he described as "ethnic and geographic unity."

It is the hope of all good Americans that their country shall emerge from the period of "the melting pot" with a developed and distinct type of citizen, who shall possess the virtues of each contributory racial strain in our blend of nationalities, and thus, that we shall achieve, with the passing years, not only racial homogeneity of a very advanced pattern, but a moral and cultural unity as well.

THUS WILL WE GROW NOT ONLY IN NUMBERS, but "in fullness and knowledge"—IN GREATNESS, AS WELL AS STRENGTH.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Bachelorette

The Bachelorette is the very newest type of modern woman. She is the feminine counterpart of the "confirmed bachelor," and not to be confused with the Bachelor Girl, who is merely a girl who hasn't married—YET.

* * *

The Bachelorette wouldn't marry the Prince of Wales if he offered himself tomorrow. She is NOT a matrimonial.

A confirmed old bachelor used to be known for being "set in his ways" and wedded to a collection of habits. NO woman was so dear to his heart as his pipe, his freedom, his night prowlings and his early morning sleep.

* * *

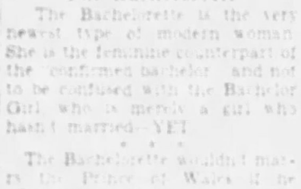
But now the world is full of WOMEN who are stealing his stuff and fast becoming confirmed bachelorettes. Single women, divorced women, and women who have tried matrimony once or twice and found it wanting.

* * *

The Bachelorette is usually a woman who is wedded to a career, a child, a business of her alimony.

* * *

She likes to go to bed with cold cream on her face and her permanent wave in hairpins. She wants to retire when she's sleepy and to get up and have her morning coffee when she wakes, without having to rustle breakfast for a man and get him off on the 8:15.



Lots of times she just wants to be let ALONE to get into a comfy old kimono and a pair of mules and go off by herself and read or commune with her soul.

* * *

She can't bear the thought of having a man around smashing things, leaving lighted cigarets on the mahogany, putting his feet on the damask chairs, scattering newspapers all over the house, dropping burning matches in the waste-basket, tracking mud over the clean linoleum, kissing her shoes and calling for his breakfast in curlpapers when she has a headache.

* * *

She often dreams of love and romance and sweet companionship and feels lonely on odd evenings when nobody drops in or asks her out for dinner.

* * *

But she's a confirmed Bachelorette and the price she'd have to pay for a husband in freedom, comfort and independence is too great. So she closes her ears to temptation, clings to her spinsterhood or her grass-widowhood and lets life go by, just like an old bachelor.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY

By Archibald Henderson

The problems of the scientist and of the inventor are often of such a delicate and complex nature as to be quite beyond the grasp of the average person. After the problem of wireless telegraphy had been solved, for example, the layman would be likely to jump to the conclusion that the problem of wireless telephony would be quickly solved. Yet this was by no means the case. Indeed, the problem of wireless telephony was not completely solved until comparatively recently.

An almost incredible amount of experimentation and research has been devoted to this problem in order to make the invention commercially practicable. Graham Bell gave no little thought to the matter, and invented the instrument known as the photophone. But this instrument was so limited in its range as to be impracticable as a commercial system.

It is quite true that the principles of wireless telephony are modifications of those of wireless telegraphy. But the difficulties to be surmounted in wireless telephony were incomparably greater. A means to be found for propogating continuous electric waves at radio frequency. An electric arc consists of two carbon rods close together and connected to a source of electrical current. By connecting an arc with a direct-current dynamo on the one hand and with a condenser on the other, the latter becomes charged and discharged, thus alternately lowering and increasing the current through the arc. If the frequency of this ebb and flow of the current does not exceed 30,000 cycles a second, the arc gives off a musical note, the pitch depending on the frequency. Because of this fact, this type of arc has been called the singing or musical arc. Wireless telephony became a practical proposition when William Duddell in 1900 discovered that the singing arc emitted continuous oscillations of constant amplitude. Unfortunately, a high frequency 100 times as great as that provided by the singing-arc was needed for satisfactory transmissions.

In 1903 Valdemar Poulsen, of Copenhagen, improved the arc considerably, and succeeded in transmitting speech from Berlin to Copenhagen, a distance of some 290 miles. Somewhat later Dr. J. Vanni hit upon the ingenious invention of a liquid microphone. With this new invention, Vanni succeeded in transmitting speech from Rome to Tripoli, a distance of some 600 miles. Dr. Goldschmidt invented the ingenious rotating-field alternator, in which a low-frequency current is transformed so that its frequency is increased as desired. One of the earliest long-distance stations to use the Goldschmidt alternator for trans-Atlantic service was the one at Hanover, Germany, working directly with Tuckerton, N. J. Another type of alternator was invented by E. F. W. Alexanderson, of the International General Electric Company. Huge machines of this type have been installed at many stations in this country and elsewhere. The invention of the thermionic valve finally brought wireless telephony to its present stage of effective development.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"Is the struggle of life worth while?" she writes.

Then follows a bitter recital of troubles and sacrifice. More than half her salary sent to her mother and kid sister so they may live in ease. Do they know that she must often go without lunch in order to buy shoes for herself? Do they realize how desperately hard it is to keep up the premiums on the life insurance she has taken out for mother? No, indeed. She likes to be generous like that. The Boy Friend knew that when he borrowed money from her. He has never paid that money back. She is too proud to ask for it. And now wages are being cut, she is facing the loss of her position.

What's the use of going on? she cries. I have tried so hard to be generous. I have made so many sacrifices, and this is the reward I get. Does it pay to be good? I'll say it doesn't! I'm thinking of ending it all in the bay so mamma can have the insurance money. That's all my life is worth now.

Ever feel like that? Sure you have. That's the way most of us at times feel when we've made a mess of things by too much Nitwit Nobility.

But are we really as good as we think we are? Were our sacrifices so praiseworthy?

Noble disappointment, noble self-pity, are not to be smiled at, not even to be pardoned if they bring bitterness, wrote Robert Louis Stevenson. "Gentleness and cheerfulness, these come before all morality; they are the perfect duties."

The world is filled with people who do good acts, then whine at the consequences.

People who want the thrill of being Big Hearted, and complain because God won't look after their interests while they're strutting their stuff—

But why should God attend to our interests when He has given us "brains and backbone for that express purpose"?

YOUR FIRST DUTY IS YOU

If you're so generous to others that you make a bum of yourself, then generosity becomes an actual vice. Nor does such generosity help the other fellow. He is responsible for his life just as you are responsible for yours. If you deprive him of that responsibility, you cripple him—and turn him into a snarling weakling.

Sacrifice that makes you want to go jump in the bay is nothing more nor less than spineless self-indulgence.

If you have to be bad to yourself in order to be good to others, there's something wrong with your brand of good-ness.

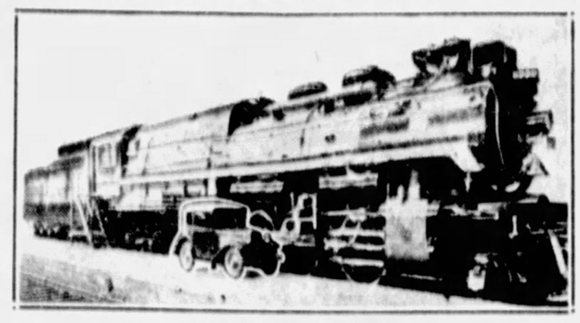
The Biggest Locomotive

A Magnificent Machine, It Will Soon Be Out of Date Like the Dinosaur.



Courtesy of Canadian Pacific

GIANT LOCOMOTIVE COMPARED WITH SMALL AUTOMOBILE

This locomotive, biggest and most powerful on the American continent, belongs to the Canadian Pacific Railroad and is called an "8,000 Type Multi Pressure Locomotive."

One hundred feet long, weighing 800,000 pounds, this engine has hauled a train a mile and one third long, which means a load one-third greater than that for which the locomotive was planned.

Think what that means, a train of cars more than 7,000 feet long, equal in length to 35 average city blocks of 200 feet each.

Each car of the long train could carry 100,000 pounds.

This means progress since the days when transportation was limited to the horsepower of four or six horses, or when they hauled great stones on rollers over the sand in Egypt, equal to the hauling power of 500,000 men. In fact, all the men in Egypt could not have hauled what this one locomotive can haul, for it would have been impossible to attach them to the load and impossible for them to apply their strength to it.

There is something fascinating for every American in the sight of the "newest and biggest locomotive." Our national life and progress have been so bound up with railroad development that each of us takes a personal interest in the "biggest."

Nevertheless, the great locomotive represents THE PAST, while the tiny automobile beside it represents the future.

And even more representative of the future, as regards transportation, is the invisible electric current that runs along a copper wire or a steel rail, feeding power to an engine that needs no coal for fuel, no water for steam.

A majority of those now living will see the day when this engine will be interesting only in a museum, such as that in which Henry Ford collects his ancient machinery of long ago.

This monster of the rails will go to join the dinosaur in the limbo of the past, with the giant mammoth and the other great embodiments of power.

The tendency today is to eliminate size and weight, reducing heavy machinery to a minimum.

Instead of digging coal and carrying it hundreds of miles to be burned in many separate furnaces, the present method is to change the coal into electric current, AT THE MINE, then let it carry itself over wires for distribution in cities far away.

The tendency in engine building is to reduce weight. Airplane engines are built that weigh less than two pounds per horsepower, as though nature had squeezed and condensed a 1,000 pound horse into a creature so small and light that a man could carry 100 horsepower.

While waiting for mechanical perfection, let us be grateful that man's genius has been able to construct a machine like this able to carry thousands of tons of wheat over mountains and pull a train more than a mile long.

FRANCE DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS—(By Mail)—In other days it was a part of a night out to drift to the Halles Centrales around 4 a. m. for a bowl of steaming onion soup. But in these more sedate years I had to be routed out by the hotel night concierge to join Willie Morgan on his daily visit to the markets.

The great Central markets are reached along upper rue de Rivoli and have been the site of Paris' food supply for centuries. The markets are in huge warehouse-like halls. Its early morning vigor has a shrieking, roaring blatancy that is almost deafening.

Awirl with blue-bloused porters, the "forts des halles" (strong men of the markets), screaming viragos, early morning drunks and swearing truckmen it offers a slice of Parisian life that is the most stimulating in all the town. The tempo is as red-corpuscled as the blood from the dripping beeves.

Here are the buxom, ruddy and laughing marchandes, the saleswomen, who seem to be in an eternal sally with customers. There is no sale without haggling. After the market closes come the pinch-faced, spindly legged children who search the refuse for food. Also elder chiffoniers with sticks.

They sort through the cast off fruits, vegetables and other oddments to refurbish and re-sell for the pot-au-fue of the Paris slums. Next in interest among the local marts, I think, is the Flea Market, so called because of its filth, and held twice weekly near one of the eastern gates.

From a casual glance the Flea Market seems to be a field with piles of abandoned junk and debris. It is mostly that, for one indeed may actually barter there for second hand tooth-brushes. Yet out of its jinkle-jumble treasure hunters have come upon rare and authenticated antiques—the loot of thieves.

Too, there is the Marche Tabac once a week at Place Maubert. Here the tatterdemalion gutter scavengers exchange, buy and sell collections of cigar and cigarette stubs. Ends of American cigarettes, incidentally, bring the very highest prices—a sou for about a hatful.

An exclusive novelty shop in one block long rue Royale shows what looks to be a huge marquis shaped diamond ring. It is carried in Milady's purse and the diamond is a strip of mirror. Adjusted to a finger the owner may inspect her rouging and powdering.

Champs Elysees has become somewhat the Fleet street of Paris. Along its expansive and sweeping pathway are such publications as Le Figaro, L'Ami du Peuple, Le Petit Parisien, L'Excelsior, Femina, Chiffons, Je Sais Tout, Comedia, Le Rire, Fantasio, Cinemonde, La Nacion, Candide, Ric et Rac and The Boulevardier. Incidentally Paris has a total of 166 daily newspapers — mostly four-page sheets and often devoted to the fruits of political blackmail.

Ike Meltzer, the Brooklyn Bridge newsie, still rushes up and down the Paris boulevards crying his American papers. For eight years he has been a familiar figure among tourists in front of the cafe de la Paix, Harry's Bar, Weber's and the Ritz Bar. His winters are spent around the Frank Gould casino at Nice, where he is also well known. Ike is married to an English girl and is the oldest American newsboy in point of service on the continent. He makes Paris a bit more friendly.

Paris has a drink automat. It is a bistro in rue Fontaine, where one may slip a coin in a slot and lap up a choice of five drinks. It is not popular. Parisians not only want to dawdle over drinks, they want beaucoup conversation along with them.

A hatless young blade bowled up to an American flapper along the curb in Place Vendome this morning and cried: "How about knocking over a few lamp posts before lunch?" She hopped in and they roared away.

The current hit tune of the cabarets is "La Petite Tonkinoise," popularized by the sepia Josephine Baker, of Harlem. I saw Miss Baker, her nails a brilliant red and hair en brosse, dining in one of the most fashionable restaurants in Paris with what looked like a monocled Egyptian.
